800 ACRES TO BE SUBDIVIDED INTO TRACTS

This week the American Land and Water Company executed a deed to 800 acres of land known as the Martinez ranch at Portola to the California Pacific Title Company for a client. It is said that nearly $100,000 was paid for the property that is to be subdivided into small tracts. The water right on the property is valuable and no doubt will be utilized to develop the land. At one time the Spring Valley Water Company negotiated for the purchase of the water rights but in some way the sale was never consummated.

The passing of the deed at this time recalls the interesting history of the ranch and adjoining properties which dates back to the mission times and the care free days of the Spanish grandees.

The outstanding figure of the history is Maximo Martinez, one of the early settlers of Portola He was born close to the Santa Clara Mission, there receiving his early training. When the uprising in Mexico took place young Martinez cast his lot with the Mexicans against the Spanish and raised a regiment of soldiers and went to battle with the soldiers of Spain. After the conflict was over and the Mexicans had won, Martinez was rewarded in receiving a grant of land at Portola coming 13000 acres of fertile hill land, now dotted with homes of millionaires and business men of San Francisco. Martinez, like all the old settlers was easy going and careless and lost much of the vast domain. During his life time he deeded considerable of the land to his sons. Jose Antone Martinez was given 3000 acres on the Portola road and it was from this portion that the 800 acres was secured by the American Land and Water Company, but only a small portion was owned at the time of the sale by Jose A. Martinez.

Maximo Martinez, who passed away more than sixty years ago, had a young and pretty daughter attending the Notre Dame Convent at San Jose, named Romana Martinez. She was to become a nun but the sudden death of her father prevented this, so she came to live with her mother at Portola. When her mother passed away she left all her land to her daughter, the youngest of the family. Her father, owing to her youth had not given her any share of his vast tracts so the mother made up for this by giving her the remaining property. Romana in due time married Mr. Boronda, a neighbor. The Boranda ranch was purchased some years ago by P. W. Selby. Mrs. Boronda passed away four years ago, leaving only a small portion of the vast tract of land left her by her mother.

Maximo Martinez, the patriot and soldier, lies in St. Dennis cemetery, a short distance from the Sand Hill road, near Portola. The monument built over the grave more than a half century ago has crumbled and fallen, as are all the grave stones in the burial place. Nearby is the grave of Dennis Martin, the pioneer who at one time owned the Pulgas Rancho, running from the mountains to the bay. Martin in the heyday of his power and wealth, built the St. Dennis church and established the cemetery close by. By a queer twist of fate no monument marks the grave of the philantropist, neither does there any shaft rise over the resting place of Maximo Martinez, both of whom in their day owned cattle on a thousand hills.

On September 23, 1890, Mrs. Boronda deeded the 800 acres to William Feehan, who a month later transferred it to the American Land and Water Company. The company was composed of E. F. Fitzpatrick and James D. Byrnes, both of whom have passed away. Their estate are disposing of the property around which circle so much historical and romantic interests.

Mrs. Peter Faber, a granddaughter of Maximo Martinez, lives in affluence at Palo Alto. Another granddaughter, Mrs. Joseph Boos resides at Redwood City.

Some years ago the American Land and Water Company sold 16 acres of the 800 to Herbert Law who has erected a palatial home on the property.

LOCAL DOG A WINNER

Mickey Moor, a racing greyhound belonging to T. P. Maloney of this city received this week a cup presented to him by Babe Ruth, well-known baseball player for winning the races at Akron, Ohio, on August 4. The race at Akron was the 26th championship race to be won by the local dog, and was witnessed by more than eight thousand people.

PIONEER WOMAN PASSES AWAY HERE MONDAY

Many sorrowing friends gathered Wednesday afternoon at the parlors of the James Crowe Co. to pay their last respects to Mrs. Sarah Louise Poole, who passed away at her home on Jefferson street Monday. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. H. Stevens of Lodi, formerly pastor of the Congregational church of this city, and were followed by cremation at Cypress Lawn.

Mrs. Poole was among the oldest residents of this county, having come to Redwood City with her parents 64 years ago. She was at that time a girl of 12 years. The family had previously lived in New Orleans, where Mrs. Poole was born.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Viner, who made their home on Hamilton street, where the Mansfield residence now stands. Mrs. Poole was one of five children, the others being Emma, Susie, Jim and Henry Viner. The latter for many years conducted a harness shop here.

As a girl Mrs. Poole attended a school which for lack of better quarters used to be held under a great spreading oak near the present residence of Chase Littlejohn. Among her schoolmates only three now survive. These are Miss Clara Shelley, John Ford and Chase Littlejohn. This was during the Civil war, and Mrs. Poole would recall with pleasure the days spent in this queer school. She used to tell of their school master, an ardent Union man he would have the pupils point out places on a large wall map of the United States which hung on one branch of the tree. If the place happened to be in the North, the pointer must be used gently and with care. But if it happened to be among the Confederate states, the pointer had to be used as a lance and the map given a stiff poke. So it happened that in time the southern states disappeared entirely from the face of the map.

When a young woman after her graduation from the outdoor school, Miss Viner married John Poole, at that time foreman of the Brittian ranch, which included most of the property west of the highway, what is now Redwood Highlands, and extended far up into the hills. The couple had two sons, John W. Poole, the well-known draryman of this city, and George T. Poole, who passed away a number of years ago. The father also died after establishing the draying business here, to which his son has ably succeeded.

Mrs. Poole was a member of the General George S. Evans Relief Corps of this city and also of the First Congregational church. She was an active member of both organizations, and dispite her age of 74 years hardly missed a day in going to town. She was a cheerful and happy disposition and was always glad to meet her friends, and especially to talk over early ays in this county. She was a good neighbor with a kindly sympathetic nature. Her loss is keenly felt by her many friends and the sympathy of the community is extended to the bereaved family.

'PEEPING TOM' CORNERED BY MOB OF NEIGHBORS

When Mrs. Oscar Sahlberg of this city found a stranger peering in through an open bedroom window of her home Wednesday night her screams aroused her husband and neighbors who chased the stranger, who fled at the alarm. After a chase of about a block he was caught by a mob of angry neighbors, who held him captive until Officers Syl. Douglass and Bud Thorpe arrived and placed him under arrest.

The stranger, who gave his name as Alfred Martin, was booked at the county jail on a charge of disturbing the peace. It is thought that in the arrest of Martin, an end will be put to the activities of an unknown man who has been terrorizing certain sections of the town by his activities in looking into windows of private houses.

Martin was arraigned in the court of City Recorder Albert Mansfield Thursday afternoon and plead not guilty. He will be given a trial on Monday.

MERCHANTS PLAN ORGANIZATION IN REDWOOD CITY

Merchants of this community met at a hotel here Wednesday evening to discuss plans for the formation of a merchants' organization for Redwood City similar in plans to those operating in other towns of the state. The local merchants were told of the activities of neighboring organizations from representatives of those from San Mateo, Palo Alto and San Jose.

The meeting Wednesday evening was presided over by President Elmore B. Hinman of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce. S. A. Crary, prominent in credit organization work in Burlingame, was appointed temporary chairman upon a motion of P. C. Long. W. A. Baylor of the San Jose Merchants' Association and H. J. McArthur and Glen Kenyon of the Palo Alto association, addressed the merchants upon the activities of their organizations.

A committee consisting of P. C. Long, W. H. Pfafflin, Henry Witte, P. A. Ryan and Dr. Norman MacKenzie was appointed to fix dues and attend to other incidentals of organizing, and a set of by-laws was read and adopted.

The purpose of the organization is primarily to improve the credit situation in this city. Other matters for the benefit of local merchants will be considered later.

CHILCOTTS TO VISIT IN EAST

R. F. Crilcott left yesterday for New York by way of Seattle, where he will meet his wife and children. From there they will proceed to New York. Mr. Chilcott is to attend the National Title Insurance Association which convenes at Atlantic City shortly. Mr. Chilcott was at the county clerk's office bright and early yesterday morning to cast his ballot to be counted at the election to be held next Tuesday. He placed his stamp opposite the name of S. M. Shortridge for senator and his only regret was that he had but one vote to give for the favorite son of San Mateo county. The Chilcotts will be absent in the east for a month during which time they will visit all points of interest.

GREAT INTEREST IN RIGHARDSON'S RE-ELECTION

The people of San Mateo county are deeply interested in the re-election of Governor F. W. Richardson. Harvvey M. Toy the president of the governor's highway commission has a hobby and this hobby is the completion of the Bayshore highway. It is his pet scheme. It is his dream to give the peninsula the best boulevard in the world. If Richardson is re-elected Mr. Toy will begin at once the preparation to complete this wonderful highway. Mr. Toy is a wealthy man, has no particular political ambition, his only aim is to give the people of San Mateo county a highway that will be unequalled in the country. Keep Harvey Toy on the job by reelecting Governor Richardson. Vote Tuesday for Richardson.

SAMPLE BALLOTS OUT

County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese, with a corps of competent clerks and assistants, this week placed in the mail sample ballots for all registered voters and in person yesterday delivered the election supplies to the various officers throughout the county. Mrs. Kneese, one of the most competent clerks in the state, has every thing in readiness for the big contest next Tuesday. The large task now is to bring the voters to the polls. It is to be hoped that all registered voters will exercise their franchise and come to the polls and vote for their favorites. Let's have one hundred per cent vote. Voter make it so by doing your duty.

INQUEST HELD ON DEATH OF BABY BOY

How little John H. Delaney met his death is still a mystery after an inquest held yesterday morning at the parlers of the Layng & Tinney Company. The little fellow, a child of 3 1-2 years, was found dead on the driveway of Mrs. Mable Nitsche, near his home in Menlo Park. Investigation showed that the child had died from a ruptured liver, evidently from a heavy blow in the abdomen, yet no signs were visable on the outside of the body except some slight scratches on the face. No sign of crushing such as would show if the child had been runover was found, and no bones were broken.

Mrs. Nitsche testified at the inquest yesterday that she had backed out of her driveway, but that the child was not there when she left. She did not hear of the accident until an hour afterward. District Attorney Smart stated yesterday that no evidence was adduced sufficient to charge Mrs. Nitsche with having hit the child, and he was working on the case late yesterday afternoon without having a solution for the puzzling affair.

The child was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Deleney of Menlo Park. Funeral services were held ysterday with interment in Holy Cross cemetery.

300 LOCAL PEOPLE REPRESENTED IN BIG PRODUCTION

What promises to be one of the most elaborate theatrical affairs ever staged in Redwood City is the forthcoming production, "A Night in Dreamland," a musical extravaganza, with a cast of 300 local people to be represented in the Sequoia Union High School auditorium on the night of September 8th.

Jay Wellington, the author of the production, has been engaged to produce the play.

This play is being sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce of Redwood City for the benefit of their advertising fund, to raise money for an elaborate Art Booklet, descriptive of Redwood City and vicinity.

All rehearsals for the production will be held in the Redwood City fire house, the first rehearsal will be held on Thursday afternoon of this week for high school students who will participate in the play, and another rehearsal for adults will be held on Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock.

Scores of people have expressed an interest and a willingness to co-operate with Director Wellington in launching this enterprise for the benefit of the Art Booklet which will mean so much to every one interested in the growth and development of our beautiful city. "A Night in Dreamland" is a 3-act musical extravaganza with eight scenes. While not possessing an actual plot, it is much on the order of a musical comedy, with a theme of "Love, Life and Youth," running through it. The production contains a melange of song and dance and will be fully equipped with spectacular lighting and scenic effects.

The entire cast will be selected from Redwood City talent and will include some of our most noted singers, dancers and performers. The launching of this enterprise is strictly a community project, a general invitation is given the talented people of the community to participate in the play, and visitors are made welcome at all rehearsals, the rehearsals prove splendid opportunities for community gatherings.

"A Night in Dreamland" has been presented in every principal city in southern California, and in prominent cities all over the this country and in Canada. During the month of March, Mr. Wellington presented his "Dreamland" in the Burlingame High School auditorium for the benefit of the Woman's Club of San Mateo, a number of Redwood City people participated in that production and at that time urged the author-producer to present his work in Redwood City. Henry Witte is acting business manager for the enterprise.

WILLIAMS-EIKERENKOTTER WEDDING HERE SATURDAY

At a pretty wedding in the Congregational church of this city Saturday evening Miss Mable Williams became the bride of Seymour Eikerenkotter. The wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. C. H. Stevens of Lodi, formerly pastor of the Congregational church of this city, and was witnessed by a large number of relatives and friends of the young people.

Mrs. Charles Rockwell, sister of the bride, and herself a recent bride, was matron of honor. The ridesmaids were Miss Florence Williams, another sister and Miss Lorraine Mitchell. The part of flower girl was taken by Roberta Long, a little cousin of the bride, while Francis Guido was the ring bearer. Music for the occasion was supplied by Mrs Phil Bray, who presided at the pipe organ and by Amos Williams, uncle of the bride, who sang, "O Promise Me." Frank McAuliffe and Homer Porter, two friends of the groom acted as ushers and Charles Rockwell was the best man. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion.

In the marriage of the two young people, two of the pioneer families of the city are united. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Williams of Cedar street, and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ford, pioneer residents of Redwood City. Eikerenkotter is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Eikerenkotter of Stambaugh street and granson of August Eikerenkotter who was the proprietor of one of the early hotels of the county which stood in Searsville, the village which occupied the site of the present Searsville lake. Seymour Eikerenkotter is now connected with the office of Charles Dimmitt, city engineer of Redwood City.

THROUGH A WOMAN'S EYES

By JEAN NEWTON

(©, by the Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

A Father Should Be Either Good Enough or Bad Enough

In Liverpool a man provided in his will that his son should inherit no part of his wine cellar, as he said, "for very good reasons."

That is all we know about the son or the father. Far be it from us to jump to blame, particularly to blame a parent for the fault of a child when we know no more about either than that the child has the shortcoming. However, we cannot escape something incongruous in a father having a well-stocked wine cellar and having to stipulate that his son is not to inherit it. The comment that springs to mind is that a man with a wine cellar should have taught his son how to use it, or, failing to do this, that he should not have had the wine cellar. The situation reflects badly on the effort he expended on his son or the example he set for him.

Except for the "newsy" nature of this case it is not nearly so unusual as it should be. Parents are all too prone to consider their responsibility to their children fulfilled when they have fed and clothed them and perhaps compelled them to attend Sunday school. They expect their children to do right and to form good habits as a matter of course, and if such wisdom does not descend upon them out of a clear sky and they do something harmful or disgraceful, the same parents feel themselves greatly wronged and ill-repaid for the tremendous effort they have given to make them turn out right.

If the problem of rearing children could be creditably disposed of in such a simple way, life would not be the complex matter it is. However, the world is becoming conscious of the fact that we owe a great deal more to our children than merely to enable them to exist and not to abuse them. We have brought them into a world filled with danger and temptation, more or less according to the equipment which we and our forbears have bequeathed them. It is our duty to arm them constructively against these dangers, to supply them with weapons to protect themselves against those elements in their environment which might constitute a danger.

It is not the "Do as I say" that is potent, but the "Do as I do!" And the great responsibility entailed by parenthood is to set the right example for our children, regardless of the personal sacrifice which this entails.

If a man simply is not equal to setting a good example for his son, there is one other way by which he can save him. That is by setting such a horrible example that his son's main ambition in life will be to be different from his father. With the man in Liverpool, who found it necessary to stipulate in his will that his son was not to have his wine cellar, the trouble is apparently that he was neither good enough nor bad enough to be of any use to the young man.

His Didn'ts

"Margaret, what made you turn down Hayden Carter?" a puzzled father inquired recently. "Wasn't he rich and rising enough to suit you? See all he's done already!"

"It wasn't his doings that bothered me," his daughter replied; "it was things he didn't do."

"I'd noticed always that he didn't make himself agreeable to most folks, but I thought it was just shyness he'd grow out of when he was better acquainted, till one day a decent-looking young man called 'Hello!' to him and he didn't answer—just looked savage for a minute."

"'That fellow seems to think he's got to speak to me every time we meet,' he growled. 'Went to school together, but he's just a bookkeeper; it doesn't get you anywhere to mix up with that kind of folks.'

"Another time we were passing the marsh road and on it a car was standing, loaded with women and children. The driver waved and called to Hayden, but he just speeded up his car.

"'Wants help, probably,' he remarked, 'but some hick'll come along and give 'em a boost. I never trouble trouble till trouble troubles me.'

"And you remember when Rita Randolph fell in her wonderful vaudeville act. It made me so sick that I got Hayden to bring me home—he wanted to stay through the program. But I wanted to do something for her—she's so brave—and I wrote a few words of sympathy and asked Hayden to send them with a box of roses—my treat, of course.

"Next night he pulled out that card—smashed!

"'Forgot all about it,' he laughed; 'I never can remember those little things.'

"It was then that I told him that our engagement was another little thing he could forget. I thought I'd better get out of trouble before it troubled me—worse."

And Margaret wasn't such a bad philosopher. Frequently people can be judged by their "didn'ts" perhaps better than by the things they do.

RUDOLPH VALENTINO

WORLD MOURNS FOR VALENTINO

LOSES LIFE BATTLE AFTER EIGHT DAYS FIGHT

SEPTIC POISONING SAID TO BE CAUSE OF DEATH

His Death Removes One of the Greatest and Most Universally Admired Stars of the Motion Picture Industry.

New York.—Rudolph Valentino, idol of millions of motion picture fans throughout the world, died in Polyclinic Hospital at 12:10 on the afternoon of August 23, after a courageous fight to live.

Death came eight days after he underwent an operation for acute appendicities and gastric ulcers.

To the end he was the gay hearted, smiling, courageous Valentino. He was as nonchalant about death as if he were playing the lead in one of the plays that made him internationally famous.

Even as life was ebbing away and darkness setting in, he turned his dark handsome face to those gathered at the bedside and, with a wan smile, said: "Don't pull the curtains down. I'm feeling fine and I want the sunlight to greet me."

At the bedside when the end came were his close friend and manager, George Ullman, Joseph Schenck, of the United Artists Corporation; Father Edward Leonard, Catholic prelate; Father Conjedo, a friend of Valentino's during his boyhood, and his four attending physicians.

Valentino was unconscious when death came. He had received the last rites of the Catholic church and was anointed with sacred oil and partook of the holy communion. As he died the priest held a crucifix to the actor's lips.

A great crowd had gathered in front of the hospital when the newspapers announced the death of Valentino. While police reserves were handling the crowd in front of the hospital the body was slipped out the back way and only a few persons saw it taken away. The remains were placed in a large wicker basket and covered with a white and gold cloth.

In the last 24 hours pleurisy, which had developed in the left chest, continued to spread, and his temperature, pulse and respiration continued to increase. First peritonitis, carried from the region of the ulcer and causing septic poisoning, which spread about the incisions, caused grave concern. Then the dread pleurisy spread.

Saline solutions were injected into the chest as nutrition for the tissues. He was given no food.

Ever since he was operated upon he was certain he would recover. His doctors, too, thought he would several days ago. But on Saturday afternoon he suffered a relapse and since that time the decline in his condition was steady.

Valentino was 31 years old. His death removes one of the greatest and most universally admired stars who ever acted for the silver sheets. He was a naturalized American of Italian birth.

His death was a shock to his thousand of admirers in New York and the millions more throughout the world.

At no time did Valentino believe he was going to die. He constantly was remarking to the attending nurses that he would soon be up and well and that he would take the vacation he had planned. When the end came he was unconscious and there was a semblance of a smile upon his lips.

Dublin.—The preliminary report of the Irish census shows that in fifteen years, from April, 1911, to April, 1926, the population of the whole of Ireland decreased from 4,390,000 to 4,229,000.

Washington.—Expansion of a federal telegraphic communication service, based on the vast system of the army and navy, to provide free facilities for all federal agencies, including Congress, is planned by the Budget Bureau.

London.—Thousands of British miners have returned to their work, although the coal strike continues in effect officially. Miners are accepting local agreements without regard to the efforts of their leaders to effect a national agreement.

San Francisco.—Nell Smith, Alameda girl swimmer, who was the first woman to swim the Golden Gate and the San Francisco Bay between San Francisco and Alameda, has announced that she would attempt the ocean course between San Pedro and Catalina Island.

The Catalina Island swim was proposed recently as a rival course to the famed English Channel, recently conquered by Gertrude Ederle. William Wrigley, owner of Catalina Island, has offered at $10,000 purse for the person successful in the swim.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Ohio Democrats Name Pomerene, Wet, to Oppose Senator Willis, Dry.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

OHIO'S primaries were the most interesting and important of those held last week, for the state will be one of the chief battlegrounds of the November election, and in the opinion of competent political observers the choice of one of the nominees will have a determining influence on the Democratic presidential nomination in 1928. Atlee Pomerene, long a leader of Ohio Democrats and a former United States senator, was nominated for the senate, defeating Supreme Court Judge Florence E. Allen by a comfortable majority. Pomerene is listed as a decided wet and opposed the eighteenth amendment when serving in the upper house. Judge Allen is an ardent dry and was supported by the Anti-Saloon league. On the Republican side is Senator Willis, who easily won a renomination. He is one of the chief supporters of prohibition in the senate and it is assumed the Ohio drys will concentrate on him. But there is a complication in the fact that the Democrats renominated Gov. Vic Donahey for a third term, and as he is a dry, the Democrats believe many drys will be held in line for their entire ticket. Pomerene's advisers, who are many, think that if he can beat Senator Willis he will stand a good chance for the Presidential nomination, and there can be little doubt that he would be formidable as a compromise candidate if there were one such deadlock as in the 1924 convention. Donahey's Republican opponent for the governorship is Myers Cooper, a business man of Cincinnati.

In Nebraska the Republicans renominated Governor McMullen, and Charles W. Bryan received the Democratic nomination without opposition. Incomplete returns from Alabama indicate that Hugo Black won the Democratic nomination for senator, equivalent to election, and that Bibb Graves is named for governor. In Arkansas Gov. Tom J. Terral seems to have been defeated by John Martineau.

Dodging her promise to resign if Moody defeated her in the primary, Gov. Miriam Ferguson of Texas has declared that she will contest with Moody for the nomination in the run-off primary set for August 28, and has raised the anti-Klan banner, and the fight is on again there.

THREE Circuit court judges sitting en banc at Dixon, Ill., held unconstitutional the Illinois primary election laws on the ground that equal representation in county conventions, with consequently in state and judicial conventions, is impossible under the existing laws. The case will go up to the Supreme court in October on appeal, and if the decision is sustained the entire system of making party nominations in Illinois will be wiped out and the old party delegate convention system will automatically return. Senator Deneen and others believe the nominations made last April will be unaffected because the November election will be over before the supreme court acts on the appeal.

For the first time since 1884 the national assembly of France, consisting of the deputies and senators sitting in Versailles, was convoked last week for the purpose of incorporating in the constitution Premier Poincare's plans for saving the republic from financial disaster. By a vote of 671 to 144 the assembly wrote into the constitution a law creating a sinking fund for the redemption of the national debt which will be autonomous and will be provided from fixed revenue sources with a sure income. The dignity as might be expected of the occasion was destroyed by the 144 dissentrants, mostly Socialist extremists. They fought the measure in every way, sang the "Carmagnole," booed and hooted, and one of their number, known as an agent of Moscow had to be removed from the palace by the guard, which was commanded by General Pelletier, the one-armed war hero.

This action by the assembly completed the victory of the Poincare cabinet and both the assembly and the parliament were adjourned. There was no attempt to obtain ratification of the debt accords with the United States and Great Britain, and the sub-commission of parliament named to study them will do nothing until September. The chairman of one of these commissions says the Mellon-Berenger agreement cannot possibly be ratified in its present form. Ambassador Herrick sailed at once for America for the especial purpose of acquainting President Coolidge and members of the cabinet with the financial situation in France and the attitude of the French government toward the debt. The Paris newspapers think he has come home to support the French aims and viewpoint. It is likely he will urge that American credits be extended to France immediately.

Prospects for acceptance of the Mellon-Berenger accord by the American senate were not enhanced by the action of Georges Clemenceau, the veteran French statesman. From the seclusion of his retirement he wrote to President Coolidge an open letter concerning war debts that was so sarcastic and covertly threatening as to be insulting.

SENATOR BORAH, addressing a gathering in Idaho, predicted that the next fifty years would mark the most severe economic war history had ever recorded and declared that in view of this impending struggle there was no just reason for the United States to give up World war debt collection.

Depicting the generosity of the United States toward foreign governments during the war as having "no parallel," Mr. Borah declared the attitude of debtor nations would cause the senate to reverse its decision and reject the world court if it were voted on today.

SO FAR as the government will admit, the religious struggle in Mexico is only a war of words. But from others come stories that give the contest a more sanguinary aspect. Correspondents of American papers have told of bloody riots and of summary executions, and now Archbishop Ruiz of the state of Michoacan has carried to the archbishopric in Mexico City a report that is the most serious yet heard. He asserts that two priests and between 27 and 37 Catholic citizens were executed after an all-day battle between troops and Catholics in Zahuayo, and estimates that fifty persons were killed in the battle. The prelate also said that at Acambaro, state of Guanajuato, disorders arising from the religious laws controversy led to other executions, and he related further instances of violence in various places.

The government has started its campaign for the nationalization of all churches and church property, and its secret agents are turning up many private chapels that are being used for public worship, contrary to the spirit of the law. Mayor Arturo Saracho of Mexico City, in the first concession of any kind made to Catholics since the religious conflict began, has decreed that the committees placed in charge of Catholic churches in the capital may be composed of five Catholics and five municipally appointed citizens for each church. Hitherto the committeemen have been municipal appointees. Under the new plan the Catholic committeemen are to have charge of the management of each church, but the municipal committees will assume responsibility for the property. It is believed this action of the mayor may somewhat appease the Catholics.

Archbishop Mora y del Rio gave a long interview to the correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, again denying the charges of President Calles against the church but really saying nothing new. The minister of the interior held the primate had thus violated the clause in the constitution prohibiting clergymen from criticizing the laws or government of Mexico, and said the matter had been "cited to the attorney general for investigation." So there is a chance that the venerable primate may be arrested and tried.

A self-constituted "good will mission from the United States," numbering thirty-two Americans, including ten Protestant clergymen from the Middle West, has concluded its inquiry into the Mexican troubles and summarizes its findings in this resolution:

"We believe that a program of education and social reform is necessary for the rehabilitation of Mexico. We believe the Calles administration is engaged in a great program of social reform and that all truly interested in the welfare of Mexico will co-operate in its essential undertakings."

Declaring the Mexican anti-clerical measures were injurious to American persons and property, the Knights of Columbus asked President Coolidge to intervene with force to compel their modification; but the President naturally has declined. Officials of the American Federation of Labor also say that body will take no sides in the controversy. Ambassador Sheffield has started home with a lot to report, but presumably about the alleged violations of treaty rights in the land and oil laws.

GEN. LINCOLN C. ANDREWS, chief of prohibition enforcement, has returned from his trip to Europe and says the agreement he made with the British authorities dooms rum row to extinction. He declines to go into details but says the basis of the plan is exchange of information and evidence and that it will tend to stop illegal shipping operations. Andrews repeated his recent statement to the effect that imported liquor was only 20 per cent of the total sold in the United States, and added: "Every time a story is published that 100 cases of liquor have been smuggled in or have mysteriously disappeared from some warehouse you can bet that these 100 cases will be sold 10,000 times. Every bootlegger in town promises to get his clients some of the good stuff and the result is that a lot of home-made is sold at increased prices."

DIPLOMATIC representatives of Jugo-Slavia, Rumania and Greece in Sofia delivered to the Bulgarian government a joint note from their governments asking that Bulgaria suppress the Macedonian revolutionary societies and prevent further violence along the frontiers. The note was firm but couched in friendly phrase, and the Bulgarian foreign minister said it would be answered within a week. So far, Bulgaria has refused to accept responsibility for the comitadjis and their border raids.

GERMANY celebrated the seventh anniversary of the republic with parades that, in Berlin at least, were interrupted by rioting on the part of the communists in which scores of persons were injured. President Coolidge sent a cablegram of congratulation to President von Hindenburg.

The German government is still pressing the allies for reduction of their garrisons in the Rhineland, and it is said the German ambassador to Paris has been conferring with M. Briand and has received the promise of further withdrawals in the near future.

IN A conference with Director of the Budget Lord at White Pine camp, President Coolidge cut the departmental estimates of expenditures for the fiscal year 1928 by about $100,000,000. Mr. Coolidge found that the appropriations requested for 1928 totaled $3,369,000,000, an increase of $154,000,000 over the total voted for. This the President said would not do, and he set to work with General Lord to meet the estimates. When they had finished they had reduced the total to $3,270,000,000.

Government officials saw a possibility of further reduction of taxes in 1928, this depending mainly on the continuation of prosperity and business expansion meantime, and on the extent to which retirement of the public debt decreases the annual interest charge on Liberty bonds.

...ress Session to Be Brief but Busy

...hington.—Although congress ...rdly rested, from seven months ...t the capitol, attention already ...g called to the formidable ar... legislative problems to be ... in the brief ninety-day session ...ng in December.

...where time will be found for ...rk to be done is expected to ...leaders more than a passing ... as several committees have been given authority to meet early in the fall to draft more bills to be added to the large number now listed.

As usual at short sessions, the senate faces the most acute situation, as this body has yet to dispose of a number of measures already passed by the house and sent there for action.

Of this group, too, the omnibus rivers and harbors bill and the French war debt settlement, promise considerable trouble.

Preceding the convening of the session, the senate will meet on November 10, as a court to hear impeachment charges brought by the house against Federal Judge George W. English of the eastern Illinois district. No time is set for conclusion of the trial which, if extended into the regular session, will add to the congestion.

Both senate and house also will have before them the long standing question of disposing of the government properties at Muscles Shoals, Ala., with little indication that speedy action can be obtained.

Regan Is Playing Great Ball

Any fan who has had the pleasure of watching Second Baseman Regan of the Boston Red Sox in action on the field will understand why he is so well liked in Beantown. He is playing better ball with each game.

BASEBALL NOTES

It costs the major leagues about $200,000 a year to maintain its staff of umpires.

Pitchers of the New York Yankees now wear catchers' shin guards in batting practice.

All a golfer like Bobby Jones has to know in the way of arithmetic is the numbers up to 72.

On September 9, 1922, William (Baby Doll) Jacobson of the St. Louis Browns made three three-base hits.

Dave Barbee, home run king of the Piedmont league, and third baseman for Greensboro, has joined the Athletics.

Manager Robinson of Brooklyn is still buying players. With his pitching staff in good shape, he is now looking for out and infielders.

The baseball fans of Boston are said by experts to have a better understanding of the fine points of the national game than those in any other city.

It begins to look as if the Boston Braves, picked by many experts in the spring to land in the first division, will be fortunate to finish out of last place.

The only left-handed catcher to achieve prominence in the major leagues was Clements, who played with Philadelphia for a number of years.

"Chief" Bender, former pitching ace for Connie Mack and now with the Chicago White Sox, has an uncanny ability in detecting the signals of rival teams.

Hank Severeid, veteran catcher of the Browns and Senators, has again changed uniforms. He was purchased by the Yankees, who were in need of backstops.

Walter Kimmick, utility infielder, was given his unconditional release by the Phillies. Kimmick was obtained from the Vernon club of the Pacific Coast league in 1924.

A movement is under way to have the rules committee of the major leagues shorten the present pitching distance to 55 feet 6 inches, a reduction of five feet.

The first new player obtained by the Pittsburgh National league baseball club for the 1927 season is Ike Danning, catcher of Idaho Falls, in the Idaho-Utah league.

Alexander Heinemann, owner of the New Orleans Pelicans, has a hat that he wears whenever it looks like rain and he doesn't want it to, such as on Sundays. It hasn't failed him in 14 years.

Paducah of the Kitty league established a world's record for consecutive games lost by losing 27 successive games. The former record was held by Louisville, they losing 26 games in 1889.

Pitcher Joe Reddy was given his release by Buffalo. For several years Reddy was reputed the best curve ball pitcher in the International, but has suffered from arm trouble the past two seasons.

Mobile has signed Stanley Skupska, a left-handed pitcher of Omaha, Neb., who was with Newark of the International league, at one time. He has been playing independent ball in Wisconsin more recently.

Rube Zellars, former Carnegie Steel pitcher, has been sold to Springfield of the Eastern league by Jersey City Internationals. Since Zellars left Sharon section he has been playing in the International circuit.

As was expected, Edward Moore, Pittsburgh second baseman, is now a member of the Boston Braves. Moore is a star infielder, and figured prominently in the victory of the Pittsburgh club in the world series last year.

John Rice, former St. Louis U. high athletic star and who also is regarded as one of the best outfielders to graduate from the puny ranks, has been sold by the Waterloo club in the Mississippi Valley league to Seattle in the Coast league.

New $125,000 Star

Fred Shulte, outfielder and leading hitter of the Milwaukee American association baseball club, has been obtained by the St. Louis Browns. Shulte, who has been batting over .400 and who has been valued at $125,000, will report next spring. He is the most expensive player ever bought by a St. Louis club. Charles Robertson and Claude Jenard, pitchers, and Robert Lamotte, infielder, go to Milwaukee in the deal.

Sporting Squibs

There are 200 golf clubs in the vicinity of New York city.

Manager Jeff Dickson, the American promoter, conducts most of the boxing entertainments given in Paris.

Helen Wills is indeed a very unusual young lady. We understand she even refuses to talk about her operation.

Every little boy born in America has the right to grow up and some day become golfing champion of Great Britain.

Next to an anvil in a garage, the most worthless thing in the world is a prize fighter's advance opinion on a prize fight.

Rowing at Washington and Lee university dates from 1874 and is the oldest organized athletic sport at that institution.

Johnnie Brown, the European bantamweight champion, now fighting in America, won the British amateur title when scarcely fourteen years of age.

Edward L. Casey, former Harvard football star, may coach the Crimson freshmen squad in the fall. Casey has been head coach at Tufts four years.

Golf will never become an outstanding collegiate sport, in the opinion of Paul Hinkle, athletic coach at Butler college, because it does not teach them spirit.

Jack Dempsey's new manager, Eugene Normile, is a calm, easy-going individual, forming a sharp contrast to the champion's energetic and restless temperament.

A new form of scoring in golf has been introduced in England, the greens being marked with white circles surrounding the holes. Points instead of strokes decide the winner.

Maybe one reason New York doesn't want the Dempsey-Tunney fight is that there are too many comedies on Broadway now.

Russell Sweet, Montana's Coast Conference sprinting champion, will be a member of the Olympic club of San Francisco football team this fall.

The Morris family has been racing thoroughbreds since 1868. The present John A. Morris is the fourth of his generation active on the turf in this country.

ROBINSON MAKES STAR OF HERMAN

Careful Handling Changes Temperamental One.

If anyone at this late date needs proof of Uncle Wilbert Robinson's rare ability to handle men and study their characters to the advantage of his team, they can have it in this year's Brooklyn team, says Murray Tynan in the New York Herald-Tribune. From this outfit, which, at the very best, is made up of cast-offs, venerable gentlemen commonly supposed to have seen their best years and younger ones that other managers found impossible to handle, Uncle Robbie had made a pennant contender. And he has done this chiefly through his uncanny ability to get the most out of his men.

The shining example is Babe Herman. There are others, of course, such as Vance, who was kicked from pillar to post before Robbie made him the great pitcher he is, but their cases are now baseball history. Herman presents a new testimonial to Robbie's rare judgment.

The Robin chieftain is the eighteenth manager Herman has played for in his checkered baseball career, and none of them could do anything with him. Under Robbie, however, he is the sensation of the league, a star who has jumped into overnight fame to become one of the leading hitters in the game at present. He may be a streak player or a flash in the pan—time alone will tell that—but if he is that will be no fault of Robinson's.

No one ever denied Herman's ability to hit. He played in every league of consequence before he came to Brooklyn, and he knocked the ball all over the orchard in every one of them. It was his temperament that hindered him and prevented him from becoming the star he is now. He was up with Ty Cobb in 1921 with Detroit, but Ty couldn't teach him anything. From the Tigers he went to the Red Sox in the Ehmke deal, and Lee Fohl did more with him than Cobb. In two years, on and off, Babe never broke into a game with the Sox.

All this might lead one to believe that Herman has used up a good many summers in all his travels around the baseball world. But he didn't. At the age of twenty-three he has struck the right manager and the road to diamond fame.

Herman has unbounded confidence in himself, an invaluable asset to a ball player. He can't stand "riding," or even a mild reproof, if he has erred in some way. And, knowing that, Robbie doesn't even correct him. He suggests, and the Babe is wise enough to take hints from whence they come. If Herman fails to hit with men on bases Robbie doesn't growl, though he may be doing that inwardly.

"Better luck next time, Babe," usually is his only comment.

Robbie's careful handling has made Herman a star, as it did many others.

Organized Cheering Cut Out by Cornell Managers

There will be no organized cheering at future Cornell baseball games and track meets. Managers of the baseball and track teams have recommended the change.

The organized cheering edict affects only these two sports. It is understood that cheering at football and basketball games, wrestling meets and indoor track programs will continue.

W. W. Buckley, manager of baseball, said that the cheering at the Pennsylvania meet, described as "poor," led to the decision to dispense with organized outbursts for the remainder of the spring. He asserted that the order was not an official act of the student council, but that it had been discussed at a recent meeting of that body and that the consensus was that baseball and outdoor track could get along without it.

Masters Fadeaway

E. Garland Braxton of the New York Yankees pitching staff recently said he had mastered the fadeaway delivery that the late Christopher Mathewson made famous, and that he intended using the fadeaway in the American league. Braxton said he "got" the delivery after practicing for three years behind the barn on his father's farm with his brother, who caught him.

Eighteen for Johnson

"How many games are you going to win this year?" was the question put to Walter Johnson the other day. Before he had a chance to reply Manager Harris said:

"Why, the youngster will win 18 sure."

"Whatever the manager says goes," replied Walter.

That's asking a lot of ball games from a fellow who has been pitching 20 years, but Johnson will deliver if anyone can.

HUSBAND DID THE WASHING

His Wife Confined to Her Bed by Ill Health

Because of his wife's frequent ill health, Mr. J. F. Gage was obliged to do the washing and cooking for the family.

One day when Mrs. Gage was confined to her bed, he brought her the newspaper to read. Among the advertisements she noticed a letter from another sick woman telling of the help she had received from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I'll try it," she decided.

Her husband brought home a bottle and only a few days after she had begun to take it she felt well enough to be up around the house. Gradually her general health improved until she is now able to do her own work.

In a letter which Mrs. Gage recently wrote, she said, "I have taken twelve bottles and feel like a new woman." She has told many women about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and one of her friends is now taking it. Her address is Mrs. J. F. Gage, Route 5, Brownwood, Texas.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been taken by women for more than half a century with very satisfactory results.

Make It Unanimous

This is the last issue of the Times-Gazette before the election, the last word to the voter on behalf of Senator Shortridge, San Mateo County's favorite son. The senator having all the qualifications and having made good at Washington it is but proper that we should urge the voters of San Mateo county to support Mr. Shortridge and give him a big vote on account of his residence in this section. He certainly can do more for this community than could a man from Los Angeles. Why vote for a candidate from the south when San Mateo county has a favorite son who is tried and true?

Make the vote unanimous in the home county for the senator. He deserves it. Let the vote on next Tuesday be such that Senator Shortridge may always point with pride to the loyalty of his neighbors and friends at home.

For Peninsula Interests

It will be for the best interests of San Mateo county to reelect Governor F. W. Richardson. He has planned through the president of the State Highway Commission, Harvey M. Toy, a big campaign of road work on the peninsula. The Bay shore Highway will be finished in a short time if Mr. Richardson is retained at Sacramento. Mr. Toy has the work well in hand and if he is kept on the commission he will complete the Skyline Boulevard, the Bayshore road and other thoroughfares planned for the county. The state highway through the county is to be widened. This improvement is to be started just as soon as funds are available.

We urge the voters to make no mistake but cast their ballot on next Tuesday for Governor Richardson. He is true and tried. Keep him at Sacramento. San Mateo county will benefit by it.

Aurther M. Free

Again we are urging the electors of this congressional district to return Arthur M. Free. Mr. Free is an independent, progressive member of congress. His years of experience have won him a commanding position on some of the most important committees of the lower house.

Hon. Herbert C. Hoover recently wrote President Ray L. Wilbur of Stanford University and urged Dr. Wilbur to support Mr. Free. He said that Mr. Free is one of the outstanding members of congress and that his position and policies have marked him as a man who can get the things for his constituents that should be secured. He further said that a change would be bad for this section.

Personally we believe that Mr. Hoover is in a good position to know about the value of a member of congress. We are also willing to back his opinion, for if there is any man in the national family who is cogniaznt of the real needs of the country, Herbert Hoover is that man.

But further than this, Mr. Free has made an excellent representative. He has watched the interests of his district. He has been on the job all of the time. He has never fathered any freak legislation. He has been a personal friend and at times a spokesman for the President of the United States. His education, training and ability all mark him as the ideal congressman. We should be glad that we have such a representative and should reward his good works by returning him to his high office with a tremenduous majority.

GOVERNOR RICHARDSON'S COURAGE

Governor Richardson's courage has been manifested on almost every sort of question, and has stood the test. He can neither be coerced nor cajoled; neither be flattered nor browbeaten. He has stood consistently for law and order, and against tremendous pressure, individual and political, has steadfastly safeguarded the public interests.

—San Jose Mercury-Herald

Important Consideration

What of Senator Samuel M. Shortridge's record since his election in 1920?

A study of the more important of his achievements as the Republican senator from California is convincing evidence of his high calibre and of the necessity that he be returned to continue his indefatigable labors in this state's behalf.

Senator Shortridge led the fight on the floor for the Dyer-Anti-Lynching Bill, which was defeated by the Democratic filibuster.

He is the author of the Shortridge Alien Enrollment Bill for which he had the backing of the Administration.

A thorough protectionist, Senator Shortridge led in the fight for the protection of California products during the long contest over the Tariff Bill. As a result California today has more tariff protection than it ever had in its history, and has more than any two states in the Union.

A great achievement, which stirred the nation, was the passage of the Japanese exclusion act renouncing the "gentlemen's agreement" with Japan. Perhaps not in the history of the United States Senate legislation has there been a greater single-handed victory for the American people than in this battle won by Senator Shortridge.

Senator Shortridge has kept his promises, as many a soldier who has had his compensation difficulties smoothed over can testify. Many a pensioner owes his monthly stipend to the Shortridge activities, and appropriations for federal departments and improvements of rivers, careful work of Senator Shortridge.

East Palo Alto

Mr. and Mrs. James Crisman of Ceres were week end visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Olson on Olive street.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Greene of Palo Alto have purchased the Amstrong property on Cherry street and Alfred Bauman of Pleasanton has purchased the Joe Mathieson place on the same street. Mr. Bauman and family moved into their new home last week.

J. C. Wilkin and sister, Miss Mary Wilkin passed a couple of days at Grant's National Park last week.

Mr. and Mrs .W. S. Forrest who have been in Paso Robles, where Mr. Forrest went for treatment, have returned home.

H. J. Siegelken is in the Stanford hospital where he will undergo an operation.

Mrs. W. P. Hatfield, who was recently operated upon in the U. of C. hospital, returned home yesterday.

Harry Griffin, who has been in the Palo Alto hospital, returned home the first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Gravestock, who have been passing three weeks in Idaho, Washington and Oregon, returned home Monday evening.

Mrs. Amy Chapin of San Mateo passed Monday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Hull.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Hill of Mountain View, who have been passing a week at the R. G. White home on Walnut street, returned home. Mr. Hill is a brother of Mrs. White.

Mrs. Chas. Ash of San Francisco, a sister of Clarence Amberg and Miss Anna Schmidt and Miss Reta Richardson, also of San Francisco and Wilson Clark of College City were week end visitors at the Amberg home on O'Conner street and celebrated the birthdays of A. O. Amberg, Mrs. Chas. Ash and Mrs. Richardson.

Miss Georgia Furbush of Oakland has passed the week at the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Ida Furush on Cherry street.

O. D. Wells motored to Salinas for a couple of days the past week. Mrs. Wells who had been visiting there returned home with him.

News of the approval by the P. G. & E. Company of the application for gas for East Palo Alto was received with much joy. While it has been asked for repeatedly and partial surveys have been made it was only a few months ago that pressure was brought to bear to have the company make a complete investigation of the situation and almost every home not equipped with electric stoves, signed up for gas service. Work will soon be started for the extension of the mains.

FIRE RAZES BARN ON SCHOOL CAMPUS

An old barn, one of the outbuildings of the old Talbot estate, and for some time used as a store house by the high school, was destroyed by fire Sunday morning (?)The fire was of unknown origin and had gained great headway in a pile of hay which occupied one corner of the building before it was discovered.

An automobile belonging to one of the workmen on the school grounds was completely burned and added considerably to the heat of the blaze when the gas tank exploded and drenched the hay with flaming petroleum. In another portion of the building a number of boxes of dynamite caps were stored and for a while the scene of the blaze was strongly remindful of the days in Verdun.

The department finally succeeded in confining the flames to the building in which they had originated and prevented the destruction of the eucalyptus grove in which it was situated and which for a time was threatened by the flames.

AVIATOR INJURED INFALL AT LOCAL FLYING FIELD

Thor Polsson, well-known aviator and designer of aeroplanes received severe injuries Monday morning at the local flying field when his plane crashed to the ground from a height of 150 feet. The accident occured when the motor of the plane stalled while the flyer was making a steep bank. He endeavored to right the plane by making a nose dive, but was too close to the ground to bring the machine under control before the plane crashed to the earth.

Polsson was removed to the Mills Memorial Hospital, where it was found that his injuries consisted of concussion of the brain, a broken nose, a fractured arm and internal injuries, the extent of which was not definitely determined. Attending physicians express hope for his recovery.

Polsson, who is 45 years old, has been interested in aviation for many years, and is numbered among the pioneer flyers of the Pacific Coast. The plane he was flying Monday was among many designed by him.

RAPSEY GAINING IN ASSEMBLY CAMPAIGN

The strong support which is behind the candidacy of Judge Rudolph Rapsey for Assembly in the northern and southern ends of San Mateo county is rapidly being unequalled in the San Mateo-Burlingame district, according to the reports of corps of enthusiastic workers who have been emphasizing the need of putting a trained man on the job to the people of those communities.

As it was expressed by a group of San Mateo people this week it is just as necessary to have a trained man as the representative of the people of the county in the Assembly as it is to have a trained man on the job in any business place.

A business man would not think of putting a man in a responsible position unless he had some training for the duties and responsibilities that would rest upon upon him. In the same way the people of the county cannot afford to have an untrained person as their representative.

Judge Rapsey through his work as an attorney and a judge is especially qualified to represent the county in the law making body of the state—the Assembly. His work as a chamber of commerce leader and an active supporter of civic progress plus his long residence in the county has brought to him a full realization of the needs of this district.

As it has been said, highways and harbor facilities are the prime needs of the county. Through his work as a former assistant to the attorney for the highway commission Rapsey can give the people of the county the best results in this work. As an attorney, as a business man, as one who understands the needs of the county, Judge Rapsey is without question the one trained candidate seeking election as assemblman for San Mateo County.

HARRY L. PARK MAN FOR BETTER SCHOOLS

"San Mateo county has a wonderful school system, and we must take precaution to see that our schools keep their present rate of progress,' says Harry L. Parkman, candidate for the assembly from this county.

"The state plays a very important part in the provision of good pects, both in equipment and in needs an active, leading representative to care for its inerests.

"If elected, I will certainly support any move to give the state better schools, and I will see to it that our county takes the lead in any such movement.

"With the opening of school, we are again impressed with the fine educational plants with which the county is equipped. Every voter should make it his aim to see that this county's school system keeps pace with its growth in other respects, bothin equipment and in school faculties," he declared.

Parkman's campaign for office is being well received throughout the county. As the day for election draws near, more and more voters realize that Harry Parkman, a successful business man, is the man for the job. His interests are sufficiently broad to represent the voters of the county, and his experience will enable him to perform the duties of office efficiently rst National's long heralded oplay, "Men of Steel," will be ing on Monday and Tuesday, st 30 and 31 at the Sequoia tre.

T NATIONAL'S HERALDED ECIAL PROVES A CLASSIC

lton Sills, who is credited the authorship of the story, n in the starring role, and ntally in what this writer ders his greatest screen per- nce.

s is magnificent. He starts ignorant laborer in an iron . He finishes as boss of a mill and son-in-law to the mill owner. And what a he runs in getting there! e you have everything that ion picture fan's heart could ly desire. There is beauti- mance, wonderful love story, es in the steel mills that your heart leap up, action en more action, laughs, set- that simply hold you spell- and thrills that most mo- tion picture producers dream of but seldom put on the screen. What more could you ask?

Sills has one of the finest casts that one could hope to see assembled. Doris Kenyon in the leading woman's role, does the best work we have seen from her on the screen.

s Mae Allison, lovely Mae, is superb, and George Fawcett, Frank Currier, Victor McLaglen and John Kolb do much to make the picture success.

But after all Sills is the picture. George Archainbaud, who directed this picture, should be proud of his work. He has reason to be very happy, as should Earl Hudson who produced it for First National.

GEORGE SIDNEY IN "SWEET DADDIES"

George Sidney, for many seasons a featured player in motion pictures, will be seen in one of the leading roles in M. C. Levee's First National production, "Sweet Daddies," which comes next Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 1 and 2 to the Sequoia Theatre. Sidney is famous for his Hebrew characterizations.

In "Sweet Daddies" Sidney plays the part of a wealthy merchant who enters into partnership with a son of Erin named Pat O'Brien. Mr. O'Brien is played by Charlie Murray, well-known Irish screen comic.

The nature of the business engaged in by the two men is somewhat obscure and the prohibition agents get after them. But everything turns out right in the end.

Meanwhile the son and daughter of the partners fall in love with each other. Jack Hulhall and Jobyna Ralston, Harold Lloyd's leading lady, take these parts. Vera Gordon, famous actress, is also seen in one of thefeatured roles.

When "Sweet Daddies" was previewed in Hollywood a noted film executive was in the audience and, on the strength of Sidney's portrayal, signed him to play the star role in the photoplay version of David Warfield's "The Auctioneer," soon to be filmed.

Alfred A. Santell, who directed Corinne Griffith in "Classified," is responsible for the direction of "Sweet Daddies."

NEW 'THANK YOU' OF PHONE GIRLS SPEEDS SERVICE

"Thank You," say the telephone operators on the Redwood City exchange these days, instead of repeating the number, as heretofore.

That this change in the acknowledging phrase, put into effect last Monday is meeting with approval of the public generally is indicated says John D. Worthington, district manager of the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Company, by the large number of compliments which are being received in the local office.

Apprehension over the presumed greater chance of errors from the failure of the operators to repeat the number is swept aside by Mr. Worthington in his report that since the new acknowledging phrase has been put into effect the percentage of errors has gone down. Knowledge on the customer's part that the number will not be repeated causes the customer to enunciate more clearly, he says.

The change of acknowledging phrases was instituted as a step in economy of time, Mr. Worthington says. "The change, he says means a saving of from 5 to 10 seconds in the handling of each call, which, in the busy day of the exchange station, aggregates hours of time and thereby expedites service generally.

Working cooperatively, progressive groups of farmers in California, solve their irrigation problem.

The Nevada County Irrigation District recently voted $7,500,000 for bonds. They will collect and divert water through a P. G. & E. power plant at a cost of so much per acre foot to the power company, after which, the water undiminished will enter irrigation ditches and canals.

The South San Joaquin and Oakdale Districts, jointly, in a like arrangement, voted $2,200,000 for bonds.

In each case the price paid for water by the power company redeems bonds and interest without any financial burden to the farmer.

GORGAS MEMORIAL INSTITUTE

CANCER

By Willy Meyer, M. D., N. Y. Member Gorgas Memorial Institute

Medical men have known for many years and the public is beginning to realize and to appreciate that scientific medicine is definitely in the age of preventing disease.

Much has been accomplished. Some scourages which formerly decimated the people of the earth, and the causes of which are known, are under control, as for instance, smallpox, diptheria and typhoid; provided those to be benefited by these wonderful discoveries show good will and sensible co-operation by allowing the family physician to rub into their skin, after superficial scratching, or inject with a clean syringe and needle beneath it, that vaccine, antitoxin, or serum which has been found efficient.

However, there is one disease, the most terrible of all, which has baffled the ingenunity of scientists all over the world—cancer. As soon as we know what causes cancer the foundation will have been laid to preventing its occurence and development.

Fully aware of their handicap, medical men are directing their attention to early recognition. Those tumors that can be seen or felt are most carefully diagnosed to determine whether they are cancerous. If found to be so and not too far advanced, they are promptly submitted to operation, to treatment with rays which are emanated by the X-Ray tube, or to application of radium.

Internal cancers are recognized principally by the symptoms they produce while important methods of examination assist in establishing the diagnosis. Worst of all are those cancers which occur in the tubes through which we breathe and swallow; in the divisions of the windpipe, and within the canal which connects mouth and stomach, the esophagus.

Up to the present moment almost every patient who quarries such a growth reaches the surgeon too late. The public and medical men must work together to bring about a prompt and wholesome change.

A persistent and unexplainable cough as well as difficulty in swallowing in formerly healthy individuals of thirty years or more, male as well as female, must at once arouse suspicion and be the signal to go to a hospital of standing where specialists can carefully examine them. Here the X-Ray tube and the rays of the electric lamp, conducted or thrown into the windpipe and its divisions, as well as into the esophagus, can corroborate, refine, or refute the suspicion or the diagnosis of the expert. If properly recognized as cancer there is only one answer—immediate operation.

Fortunately the surgery of the chest has su ciently advanced to enable the operator of today not only to reach every organ in the chest has sufficiently advanced to Methods have been evolved to deal properly with the troubles mentioned and give the patient his only chance.

A medicine, a pill, or a salve prescribed for these troubles, by some one who does not know, means delay in doing the correct thing, means destroying hope for a definite cure.

DELAY—THE EXECUTIONER IN DISEASE

By Miles F. Porter, M. D. Fort Wayne, Indiana Member Gorgas Memorial Institute

To prevent disease and deformity is the most important job the medical profession has to prform. The next most important job of the medical profession is to cure people when they get sick.

In ordinary parlance the profession, generally speaking, is "on to" its job and doing its work well and faithfully. In spite of this fact we are losing hundreds of thousands of people annually, unnessarily, and are daily confronted with hideous deformities that need not have been.

One-third of the deaths due to obstruction of the bowels, perhaps one-half the deaths due to cancer, more than one hundred thousand in the United States each year, practically all of the deaths due to strangulated hernia, as well as those due to appendicitis, are due to delay in the institution of proper treatment. Who is responsible for these delays and the consequent harvest of death: Rarely the doctor, usually the patient.

People generally consult a lawyer to keep out of trouble rather than to get them out of trobule. How much suffering and sickness would be avoided if they would follow the same tactics with their doctor and avail themselves of his knowledge to keep them from getting sick!

To consult your doctor early is economical from the standpoint of life, health, happiness and money. Many maladies are symtomless at the start, and careful examination by a trained man is necessary for their recognition. Therefore, to avoid being a victim of delay, have your doctor take periodic invoices of your physical assets. Then follow his advice.

Elect I. M. PECKHAM, Associate Justice, District Court of Appeals Pol. Adv.

Cleaning Without Odor by the Thomas Process

For many years of experience taught us that it is impossible to perfect cleaning with cheap, poor methods. That is why we find it necessary to invest nearly $100,000 in the equipment of a plant and the establishment of an organization to do the class of work demanded by our customer.

With the "F. THOMAS PROCESS" we do not only remove every particle of dust but we return your garments without that usual disagreeable smell of gasoline. Every drop of gasoline we use in cleaning is redistilled and very highly refined.

Raw gasoline — the kind that you can buy to you automobile — is full of heavy oils and unfit for cleaning fabrics. It is little bet ter than ordinary distillate and leaves a sickening gasoline smel on your clothes.

BEFORE THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF THE COUNTY OF SAN MATEO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

PETITION TO REORGANIZE MENLO PARK SANITARY DISTRICT UNDER SANITARY ACT OF 1923.

To the Honorable Board of Supervisors of the County of San Mateo, State of California:

Now come the undersigned, each of whom is a resident and freeholder within the Menlo Park Sanitary District, and respectfully represent unto said Board as follows:

That the Menlo Park Sanitary District, the exterior boundaries of which are hereafter set forth, was organized under that certain act entitled "An act to provide for the formation, government, operation and dissolution of Sanitary Districts in any part of the state for the construction of sewers and other sanitary purposes; the acquisition of property therefor; the calling and conducting of elections in such districts; the assessment, levy, collection, custody and disbursement of taxes therein; the issuance and disposal of the bonds thereof, and the determination of their validity, and making provision for the payment of such bonds and the disposal of their proceeds,' approved March 31st, 1891; that said district was organized under the name of "Menlo Park Sanitary District" and that the exterior boundaries of said district are as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at the point of intersection of the northerly line of the Bay Road with the easterly line of Willow Road; thence in a southerly direction crossing said Bay Road and along the said easterly line of said Willow Road to the point of its intersection with the northerly line of Middlefield Road; thence in an easterly direction along the northerly line of said Middlefield Road to a point where the same intersects the center line of San Francisquito Creek; thence along the center line of said Creek and up its course and in a southerly direction to a point that would be intersected by the southerly line of Olive Avenue if extended in an easterly direction; thence westerly and along what would be the southerly line of said Olive Avenue and the southerly line of said Olive Avenue to the westerly line of Valparaiso Avenue; thence continuing westerly in a straight line which would be an extension of said southerly line of said Olive Avenue to a point five hundred (500) feet westerly of the westerly line of Atherton avenue or Selby Lane; thence northerly and on a line parallel with and at all times distant five hundred (500) feet from the said westerly line of said Atherton avenue or Selby Lane to and across the County Road leading from San Francisco to San Jose to the northerly line of said County Road; thence easterly along said line of said County Road to a point that would be five hundred (500) feet westerly from the intersection of said line of said County Road and the westerly line of Fair Oaks Lane, and thence continuing said line in a northerly direction parallel to and at all times five hundred (500) feet distant from the westerly line of Fair Oaks Lane to and across Middlefield Road to the northerly line of said Middlefield Road; thence easterly along the northern line of said Middlefield Road to a point that would be five hundred (500) feet westerly from the point of intersection of said northerly line of said Middlefield Road with the westerly line of Marsh Road; thence in a northerly direction parallel to and at all times five hundred (500) feet distant from the westerly line of said Marsh Road to a point where said line extended across the Bay Road would intersect the northerly line of said Bay Road; thence in an easterly direction and along the northerly line of said Bay Road to the place of beginning.

That your petitioners believe it is to the interest of said Menlo Park Sanitary Board and all residents and taxpayers thereof that said Sanitary District be re-organized as a Sanitary District under the provisions of "An act to provide for the formation, government, operation, reorganization, dissolution and alteration of boundaries of sanitary districts in any part of the state, for the construction of sewers, septic tanks and other sanitary purposes; the acquisition of property thereby; the calling and conducting of elections in such districts; the assessment, levy, collection, custody and disbursement of taxes therein; the issuance and disposal of the bonds thereof and the determination of their validity and making provision for the payment of such bonds and the disposal of their proceeds; to empower sanitary boards to make and enforce sanitary regulations and providing penalties for violations thereof," approved May 17, 1923,

WHEREFORE, petitioners pray that a hearing be had upon this petition; that due notice thereof be given in all respects as required by law, and that upon due notice given and proceedings had that said Menlo Park Sanitary District be re-organized under the Sanitary Act of 1923; and that such further order be made as to the board shall seem proper in the premises.

Political Pot Boils As Campaigning Time Draws to a Clos

Intense Interest Shown in State and Local Campaigns

TO THE VOTERS OF THE THIRD TOWNSHIP

NOW that the campaign for August Primaries is coming to a close, I take this means of saying one last word to you.

I was born at Portola Valley, back of old Searsville, fifty-four years ago; went to my first school at old Searsville where the Searsville lake now is. Also some of the old timers will recall some of my old schoolmates, I well remember and are in the community such as the Hallecits, the Boos family, the Hugh Kelley boys and girls, the Conneys, and a great many others too numerous to mention. In later years my folks moved to Redwood City and I also went to school there. I well remember my teachers there; first I had Miss Mary Hanley and later I had Mrs. G. P. Hartley as my teacher. I also well remember some of my school mates of the long past; among them were such boys and girls as the Cullens, the Beers, the Goulds, the Staffords, Roy Cloud, J. W. Poole, the Winters, the Genorbios and also a great many others. I grew up to manhood here in the Third Township; started farming and teaming when I was 22 years of age; have been a taxipayer for over thirty years; always lived in the Third Township. In 1895 I was married to Ceres Rodgers of the Alpine and La Honda district; also a product of the Third Township, and we are still residing here. We have raised our family here; two boys and two girls; had our two sons in the World War; although one was but eighteen years of age when war we declared, he concluded that his country needed him and went and enlisted and his brother did not wait to be [illegible] with him. I have been a farmer and teamster for over thirty years, but I realize that both of those occupations are a thing of the past in these parts.

I am not in this race on the impulse of the moment. I was a candidate for the office of Constable four years ago, although I had no idea that I could nor any desire to beat the then incumbent, the Honorable Martin Walsh, now deceased, as he was one of the best officials this district ever had and was a very dear and close friend of mine, but I then had made up my mind that I wanted to serve the public in that capacity and I took that opportunity to put my name before the people of the Third township, hoping some day that there would be an opening and a clear field for a new Constable and the time has now come; I have alweys been a law abiding citizen myself and am a thorough believer in law enforcement. I am now a Police Officer for the Town of Atherton; have been such for nearly three years. My record as a peace officer is an open book and I am sure it will stand inspection by anyone who cares to look it up, so now with what experience I have had in police work, and knowing the District as I do, and I do know every nook and corner of the Third Township as well as I know my back yard, I feel that I am very well qualified to serve you as Constable and if elected my aim will always be to serve you honorably and to always discharge the duties of my office and enforce the laws as they are written without fear or favor and regardless of with whom I have to deal with, as I fear no man and I am under obligations to no one.

Gratefully yours,
JOS. B. FELIZ

Elsa S. McGinn Pledges to Upbuilding County

Emphasizing the fact that the entire time of any representative who is elected to serve San Mateo county in the legislature should be given to the best interests of San Mateo county at Sacramento, Mrs. Elsa S. McGinn, candidate for election at the primaries next month has given her pledge that she will, if elected, devote her time exclusivly to measures for upbuilding of San Mateo county business, good roads, improved transportation and all measures designed to promote the progress and general growth and prosperity of the county as a whole.

"Those who know the history of San Mateo county's representation in the State Legislature," said Mrs. McGinn this week, will agree with me that this element of time is of vast importance in securing measures for the best interests of the county. "If elected, I pledge myself to devote my entire time to work exclusively for the interests of the people who elect me."

Elsa S. McGinn for Assembly Clubs are being organized in all cities of the county and general headquarters for the county organization are being opened this week at Second avenue and B. street, San Mateo. Desks and telephones are being installed at the headquarters from which material for the campaign and all information will be sent out to the units of the big county organization. The county committee is headed by C. K. Melrose, San Mateo, and Attorney Gilbert D. Ferrell of Burlingame is chairman of the executive board for the county organization pledged to the election of Mrs. McGinn at the coming primaries.

JUDGE O'CONNOR CAMPAIGNING ON RECORD

HAS DONE THINGS

That Judge Percy O'Connor candidate for Congress in the Eighth District, is held in high esteem in his home city, San Jose, and that he is really a man who "makes good in his pre-election promises" is proved by an article which appeared in the San Jose Municiple Record.

Judge Percy O'Connor was elected police judge in San Jose two years ago on a law enforcement program. That he has made good is agreed by all.

The article referred to above is as follows:

An Efficient Court

The Police Court of the City of San Jose is presided over by Percy O'Connor, who established quite a reputation since assuming the duties of Police Judge.

Traffic and criminal cases are tried in the Police Court and during the last fiscal year many thousands of cases were tried, with many jail sentences imposed and $64,085.00 in fines collected, the bulk of the fines being collected from persons charged with "bootlegging."

Prior to the accession of Percy O'Connor to the bench in 1924, Chinese lotteries and bootleggers were quit eprevalent, causing the Department of Police much concern in securing convictions. An ordinance prohibiting lotteries was adopted by the electors in 1924 and with Judge Percy O'Connor to administer justice the operators of Chinese lotteries closed their doors after one of the leading Chinese was sentenced to pay a fine of $500.00 and be imprisoned in the city prison for a period of 180 days. In cases of "bootlegging," where the offender is charged with unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor and there is no prior conviction the fine is $500 and in cases of unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor the offender is certified for trial in the Superior Court if there is sufficient cause to believe the defendant is guilty. It is mighty difficult now for even old "rounders" to quench their thirst with other than lawful liquid in the city.

Speeding and reckless driving has been reduced to a minimum by reason of the activity of the traffic officers in apprehending offenders and the Court administering justice impartially.

A condition that has been overlooked by many in considering the situation now and as it was in years past is the great decrease in the number of drug addicts in the city. Formerly they were a regular scourge, committing petty thiever yat every opportunity to secure funds with which to purchase narcotics, but now with the Chinese lotteries only a memory of the past and the Chinese population only a trifle of its former strength, the dope addicts evidently gather in other cities, for San Jose is remarkably free from their presence and thievery.

HERBERT HOOVER FAVORS ELECTION OF ARTHUR FREE

The following letter has been received by Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford University, from Herbert Hoover, secretary of Commerce, urging the re-election of Congressman Arthur M. Free:

Department of Commerce
Office of the Secretary
Washington, August 6, 1926

President Ray Lyman Wilbur,
Stanford University, Calif.
My dear Wilbur:

I notice that there have been a number of entries against Arthur Free in our congressional district. I am sorry to see this, simply from the point of view of the interest of the State of California and the country generally. Free has shown himself to be one of the ablest men that California has in Congress. Not only has he been most zealous in the support of every California matter but he has created such a measure of esteem in Congress generally as to give him a very wide influence, and already he has gained a ranking position on several of the most important committee, such that could not be replaced except by years of service from anyone else.

The one reason why many localitites in the United States apparently dominate Congress is because they have learned that continuous service of good men places these men in stategic positions and gives them experience and skill in public affairs which results in enormous results to their districts and to their states, and the country at large. It would be a great pity for our district and for California to lose the great gains in this direction that Free has accomplished. Changing good men to Congress every two or four years absolutely negatives their possible service. It requires at least two or three years of apprenticeship for them to learn their way about in the government departments and in Congress itself, as well as in the understanding of national problems, all of which is purely wasted by constantly shifting personnel.

I have no doubt that Mr. Free's opponents are good men, but if the district and California wish service, and if they wish to contribute to national service as well, they should maintain skill and experience in continuous service just the same as any business concern would do.

Yours faithfully,
HERBERT HOOVER

RETAIN--
Dr. Wm. A. BROOK
COUNTY CORONER AND PUBLIC ADMINISTRATOR

EDWARD STACK IN APPEAL TO VOTERS

Edward M. Stack, one of the candidates for county treasurer, has submitted the following appeal for support at the primary election and giving the reasons why he is qualified to fill the position:

To the Voters of San Mateo County

On July 17th, 1914, I was appointed your Deputy County Auditor by Mr. W. H. Underhill who was at that time County Auditor and who subsequently retired from the office on January 1, 1915.

When I assumed this position at that time I found the office in a very bad state and I realized that only the most heroic efforts on my part could bring it out of what seemed a hopeless situation.

This condition must not be reflected on Mr. Underhill for it so happened during a serious illness that prostrated him and kept him out of touch with the affairs of his office, but it was one that would have cast ignominy on it and might have resulted in financial loss both to the county and those friends of Mr. Underhill who were his bondsmen. I saw the situation and faced it squarely without the slighest assistance being offered, and with all the power at my command, plunged into the thing alone and succeeded by almost superhuman effort to bring this seemingly hopeless task out of its confusion.

When Mr. J. J. Shields assumed the office of Auditor in January, 1915, he appointed me to act as his deputy, which office I have held to this day.

During my 12 years of service to the county as Deputy Auditor, I have handled the financial statistics of the county in all its branches, replacing an ancient and crude system of handling county affairs with one that fits perfectly into every detail of the county financial system.

My thorough knowledge and experience has carried me through every branch of the county that handles finances, and upon numerous occasions that experience has been called upon for assistance where it was needed and my assistance was in every case cheerfully given.

I am asking the support of the voters for the important office of County Treasurer because I am thoroughly equipped with the knowledge and experience that must go with it and I feel further that since it is your desire and mind to succeed and better our position in life, it is only fair to myself to seek this higher position and should I be successful I shall look upon it as an incentive toward further activities to the best interests of the entire county.

A Statement to Voters of San Mateo County by Elsa S. McGinn, Candidate for Representative, Forty Second Assembly District San Mateo County

I am depending upon my friends to elect me, friends I have gained in more than 10 years of public work in this county, friends who have the best interests of our communities at heart, and who must not only vote for me but see that others do the same. I have accepted no contributions for my campaign; I have made no promises to any private or corporate interest nor to any group or faction. I am depending alone upon voluntary assistance—your assistance.

I firmly believe I have demonstrated my ability to do things, to get results, to meet sincerely and to discharge fully any public trust with which I may be honored. And I assure you I shall consider it an honor if you send me to Sacramento as your representative and that you will receive a new and better type of representation than you have had in the past. If I were not sure of all these things, I would not for a moment ask your support, nor believe myself entitled to it.

I ask to be your representative because I know the needs of this county and I have the time to devote to those needs, time that no business man could give, under the same circumstances. I am not seeking a paying position, one to be taken from any man dependent upon the salary of the office.

I am asking your support because I have a sincere desire to serve as the representative of San Mateo county. I have the time and I believe I have the ability. I assure you that I will, if elected, give my whole time to the best interests of a majority of the voters of this county and to no other purpose or cause.

You cannot afford to experiment with your votes. There is far too much at stake. You must have a candidate with a known record, one who is familiar with the needs of our county and devoted to the interests of the county as a whole, resolved that no privileges shall be given, by legislation, to any special group or any corporation. I want you to bear in mind these statements when you go to the polls, regardless of how you vote. You know my record. You are my judges. I leave the issue in your hands.

New Telephone Building at San Carlos

On Wednesday, September 1st, the new San Carlos and Belmont Exchange of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, located on the north side of Laurel street, west of Holly street, San Carlos, will be placed in operation, J. D. Worthington, manager of the telephone company here, announced this week.

The land and new building represents an expenditure of approximately $11,000, and the exchange equipment an outlay of approximately $66,000. Two sections of switchboard have been installed in the rear of the building, which combined with the necessary associated equipment cost about $12-000. Eight miles of aerial cable, containing from 50 to 400 pairs of wires have been placed throughout Belmont, San Carlos and the Devonshire and Belle Monti tracts. This cable, in turn, necessitated the installation of 135 cable terminals, and the total cost of installing the outside equipment was approximately $54,000. It is also proposed to extend a 400 pair cable south of San Carlos to serve the San Carlos addition, Oak Park and White Oak Park. This cable provides for the necessary facilities to furnish service for these tracts as soon as they are developed.

The front part of the building will be devoted to quarters for the public, while in the rear, the exchange equipment, including switchboard, batteries, distributing frames, generators, etc. have been installed. A rest room and locker room have also been provided in the rear of the building for the benefit of the operators.

In conjunction with this new exchange the Telephone Company is going to hold an "open house" day and a cordial invitation is extended to everyone to visit this exchange and inspect all of the equipment on the opening day. Representatives will be on hand to explain the different apparata and their functionings.

Manager Worthington reiterated his former statement, saying: "This new exchange, representing a total expenditure of approximately $77,000, is, as I have stated previously, an emphatic indication of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company's confidence in the future rapid expansion of San Carlos and Belmont, and the surrounding tracts.

The exchange, upon its opening, will serve approximately 300 customers, and according to the figures of the company's engineers, this number will rapidly increase. A temporary directory listing of all the customers to whom service will be furnished by this exchange will soon be distributed.

MAN JAILED FOR DRINKING; DIES IN COUNTY JAIL CELL

When Frank Channel, 24, said to be a carpenter, appeared before Police Judge Kertell of San Mateo Tuesday, he was in what appeared to be a state bordering on delerium tremens. He is said to have been drinking heavily of liquor of doubtful origin and was shaking badly. He was sentenced to a term of fifteen days in the county jail.

Channel spent only one day of his sentence, however, as he was found dead in his cell Wednesday. He was seen by attendants at the jail Wednesday morning a few minutes before he was found dead, and at that time appeared to be better than when brought to the jail.

An inquest was held Thursday afternoon at the parlors of the James Crowe Co. The verdict arrived at was that Channel had dilitation of the heart caused by gastritis."

Story of Local Oil Deal Appears In Trade Journal

A copy of the California Oil World received by E. B .Hinman, president of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce, contains a very full account of the recent sale of the oil lease near La Honda, owned by the La Honda Oil Fields Association. It contains much information of interest to readers in this county and we herewith reprint the article in full:

"The La Honda Oil Fields Association's 1900-acre lease, three well and a small refinery, in San Mateo county, have been taken over by Long Beach capital, represented by F. C. Reitman and A. C. Eddy. It will be operated by the La Honda Oil Corp. While interested parties are connected with the Fidelity Oil Co., of Lang Beach, that corporation is not interested. Stock will not be sold to the public, according to advices.

"The La Honda Oil Fields Association (Thomas A. Costello, San Francisco, president), which drilled there wells and spent nearly $300,000 on development, retains an overriding royalty. Further financial details have not been made public.

"Well No. 1 went to 3100 feet, developed oil sand at 1200, but went on. The log claims 900 feet of oil sand, heavy gas pressure the last 300 feet. Potential capacity was estimated high by company officers, several visitors and the drilling crews—1000 barrels or more—but because of the lack of markets, storage or transportation facilities the well was capped without a test being made.

"Well No. 2 went to 1130 feet and has produced 50 to 75 barrels per day, testing 26 gravity, asphalt base with 2 per cent paraffin. Well No. 3 should be brought in within a week. It is now down 1075 feet, in oil sand, with prospects estimated at 75 barrels. It is located 2000 feet across the structure from No. 2.

"Thirty years ago the Pacific Oil Co., which later became the Standard Oil Company of California, drilled here. Its wells were shallow and not located according to present day methods. They failed to get commercial results but oil still flows from the abandoned holes. There are strong seepages and oil springs. At Halfmoon Bay, a few miles north of La Honda, wells 50 to 150 feet deep have for many years produced a barrel or two a day each.

"The one-still, 100-barrel refinery, gasoline from which is now sold locally, will be renovated and enlarged to 500 barrels capacity at once. Dr. Walter Smith, formerly of the Golden State refinery at Long Beach, will be in charge. Later, a refinery may be located at Redwood City or South San Francisco and connected with the wells by a pipe line."

Present Day Cook Books Show An Increasing Appreciation Of Ice

With the growing appreciation of the value of ice in the preparation and palatability have become tion of foods, ice is becoming listed as among those present in more and more of the recipes of the present day cook book. Through the culinary experiments and successes of domestic science experts, those dishes revealing the highest degree of caloric perfection and palatability hav become catalogued in cook books and represented, through this medium, to thousands of housewives. In an age of Vitamin "A" the housewife is readily susceptible to the fact that foods lose much of their nutritive value if not kept on ice. The economy of so preserving otherwise perishable foods has been so widely and thoroughly experienced that seasonal habits of ice consumption are rapidly undergoing a change—and six month users are becoming twelve month users four month users six month users, and those who had previously not used it at all have become summer month consumers.

There was a time, not in a very distant past, when a certain recipe, after telling "how" would suggest that the particular dish be "left to stand on the ice" for a given period of time. Standard cookbooks made this optional, with the idea that only artists of cookery would really apply this significant touch. Today, ice is as definitely present in those recipes in which ice is a desirable factor, as the yeast in bread or the fruit in fruit salad. A dish which calls for ice but is srved without is as socially declassee as a piece of peach pie at breakfast.

CLARK MEETING A FROST

Judge Robert M. Clarke, candidate for United States Senator, who was billed to speak on the front steps of the courthouse on Tuesday last, arrived at 2 o'clock and just had five people to listen to him. Owing to the smallness of the crowd the judge refrained from speaking and after shaking hands with the five voters motored to San Mateo. Another frost awaited him there. This is simply an indication of the rousing vote his opponent, Senator S. M. Shortridge is going to receive in the county next Tuesday.

Crowds to View S. S. F. Ground Breaking Today

Ground breaking for construction of the Bay Shore Underpass at South City this afternoon promises to a numerously-witnessed and impressive ceremony. Every governmental and civic organization in the peninsula communities and Santa Cruz, Monterey and San Benito counties has accepted an invitation to send as many delegates as can possibly attend, and scores of individual acceptances have also been received by the joint committee on arrangements, headed by T. P. Andrews, chairman of the Down Town Association's committee on highways, and President P. H. Thompson of the South City Chamber of Commerce, to whom that function was assigned by the State Highway Commission.

It has been decided to have all participating in the event assemble at 1 o'clock in front of the South City Chamber of Commerce and march in procession, headed by the South City band, to where the exercises will be held, where a big platform is being erected to accommodate the speakers and as many prominet promoters of the Bay Shore Highway project as can comfortably be seated.

President E. W. Milburn of the Down Town Association, will open the program by presenting Harvey M. Toy, head of the State Highway Commission, as chairman of the day. Then, after talks by Supervisor Richard J. Welch, representing Mayor James Rolph of San Francisco, and John Williams of the South City Chamber of Commerce, the groundbreaking ceremony will be jointly performed by Governor Friend W. Richardson and Supervisor James B. McSheehy, chairman of the San Francisco Board of Supervisors' Finance Committee, the body that put through the $500,-000 appropriation by which construction of the Bay Shore Highway was made possible.

The tunnel will be the largest in the State Highway system. Eight hundred feet long, it will have roadway forty feet in width paralleled by an eight-foot-wide sidewalk its entire length. Constructed of thick concrete, heavily reinforced with steel, it will be sufficiently stout to more than support the main tracks of the Southern Pacific and the San Francisco Belt Line—sixteen in all. As the ceiling will be nine feet below bay level at ebb tide, the plans provide every precaution against seepage.

Without this tunnell, automobile traffic over the Bay Shore Highway would be extremely dangerous at that point, as trains are almost constantly passing it. The necessity of such a structure became evident when ground was broken for the highway by Mayor James Rolph and Supervisor Ralph McLaren of San Francisco, with the Down Town Association staging the ceremonies. Since then seven miles of the highway have been built across the marsh stretching from South City to Burlingame and may be ready for graveling when the tunnel is ready for traffic.

Construction of the underpass would have been started earlier if the Southern Pacific Company had not petitioned for a rehearing of the State Railroad Commission's original distribution of the cost, claiming that the expense of extending the barrel of the underpass so as to provide for future additional trackage overhead should not be borne exclusively by it and the Belt Line. Six months after the petition was filed the revised apportionment was announced as follows: State Highway Commission, 71.2 per cent; Southern Pacific, 23.7 per cent; Belt Line, 4.1 per cent.

Barrett & Hilp, the contractors whose bid of $266,283.10 procured the job, have reported that after ground is broken their work will be carried on with all possible dispatch and finished within the 300-day time limit.

The price was moderate—too moderate, Caleb thought, rich with unspent salary and the possession of a thousand shares of Crystal Springs stock, preferred issue. Still, that was the artist's business, to price his own wares. While he waited for the group about the painter to dissolve, some one entered the gallery back of him and came swiftly up behind him with light steps. He turned to greet Mrs. Carquinez, her face alight with welcome greeting, her jade eyes surveying him with their perpetual appraisal.

"This is fine!" she exclaimed. "Do you know, we have been talking about you all the afternoon? Or nearly all. I have lots of news for you," she added, the jade eyes full of promises.

"Carky has sold three pictures and we are going to celebrate," she went on. "We exist between sales, you know."

Caleb had a vision of a noisy studio gathering. He was not in the humor for such a celebration, not even for the news that the artist's wife suggested would be his reward.

"I'm afraid—" he commenced slowly. She broke in.

"There is nothing to be afraid of," she laughed. "It isn't that kind of a celebration. You and I and Carky will go back to the studio as soon as it is too dark to sell any more pictures. Carky won't exhibit under artificial light, you know. We shall bear with us luxuries, lychis, alligator pears, mushrooms, preserved ginger and other more substantial things. Carky will cook. I thought I could, before I married him, but I discovered my mistake. Therefore, on special occasions, Carky plays chef. You can stay all night or leave for your old gravel beds. We live across the bay, you know or you should know. Coming? You'll be sorry if you don't. There will be just—us." She emphasized the last word a trifle and stood looking at Caleb with her hands and arms a little extended in an invitation that was irresistible in its genuineness.

"I'll come," said Caleb, "if—"

"No ifs. You and I will go a-marketing. Come on."

"Not until I've bought this picture. I am going to take it along with me. It grips me, aside from the painting of it. What does 'La Tenaya' mean?"

"The Sink. As applied to a desert cistern, natural or otherwise," she answered. "It is in your line, isn't it? But I'm glad you chose it. It is my favorite and one of Carky's."

Presently Caleb and Mrs. Carquinez did their marketing from the cab that Caleb chartered, through the markets and up Chinatown. Caleb bought some masses of iris for his share in the feast and then, on their way back to the studio, he halted the machine outside the most famous of Golden's stores, Le Blanc's.

"How old is the kiddy, Mrs. Carquinez?" he asked. "You told me there was one, at Vedder's. A girl. How old?"

"She is not included in these celebrations, Mr. Warner. Please don't—"

"Please let me. Mrs. Carquinez, I've been cooped up for months without blowing myself for a penny. This is my affair. You are not even to come in. I am going to choose it myself."

She laughed while Caleb entered and was whisked up to the floor consecrated to children's toys. He simplified matters and dodged his own ignorance by demanding the most elaborate doll on the floor. Mrs. Carquinez said nothing much, affecting an air of disapproval, tempered by the look in her eyes, though she did exclaim at the size of the box.

"My child is only of ordinary dimensions, Mr. Warner. Have you tried to present her with a dancing partner of her own size?"

Caleb carried off his canvas triumphantly under his arm, despite Carquinez' plea that it should be framed—at his expense, under his direction, in exchange for the present to his child.

The studio proper occupied all the level ground, a great room with the big north light at one end, a fireplace at the other. There was a fire in the hearth, glowing logs on andirons, more for charm than necessary heat. A settle with cushions that picked up the blacks and reds and white of a Navajo rug was empty. A big chair contained a slender figure in black holding a child.

Carquinez had descended to his kitchen with the celebration plunder. Mrs. Carquinez checked Caleb on the studio threshold while he took in the scene. The girl in black was crooning softly.

The child looked up and slid from the cuddly lap with a cry of—

"Madre! Auntie Betty, it's madre!" and came running to halt at the sight of Caleb—a slender elf with brown eyes big with astonishment and shyness and her mother's ash-gold hair entangling fire and lamplight. Behind her Betty Clinton got up and stood looking at Caleb.

The production of the marvelous doll broke all awkwardness of the meeting and, as the child cried out her rapture, Betty and Caleb shook hands.

"He is part of the celebration, Betty," said Mrs. Carquinez. "We sold four canvases and he bought one of them. The best, 'La Tenaya.' Elsie, you haven't thanked Mr. Warner."

"I don't know how," said Elsie precociously. "You are a very nice gentleman to think of me. Did you bring a dolly for Aunt Betty's baby?"

Betty Clinton seemed a little confused and Mrs. Carquinez laughed and changed the subject.

"Has she had her supper, Betty? Then it is bedtime." The child disappeared with Betty.

"She is Elsie's second mother, you see. I told you there would be just 'us,'" said the artist's wife. "Now, then, you and I will transform ourselves into kitchen assistants."

It was a wonderful dinner, served on the studio table. Afterward Mrs. Carquinez sat down to a piano that lurked in a shadowy corner and played snatches of Chopin, giving place to the husband, who produced a guitar and sang "La Paloma."

"His enthusiasm is greater than his musical quality," laughed his wife, "but this is our celebration chant."

And then she went back into the house and, after a little, called Carquinez, leaving the two alone.

"I am glad you came," said Betty. "I have something to say to you. An apology. I tried to write it, but that seemed cowardly. Now I have got my opportunity.

"Mary Morgan came to me," she went on. "She is in Sacramento with an irrigation concern and doing very well. She could not well take the child with her at first and so—she brought it with her when she visited me—Maria is playing foster mother. It is too young for dolls, though.

"You can guess why Mary Morgan came to El Nido. She told me all that you had done for her, and Mr. Cox, and she told me all of the miserable business between her and Baxter, together with how he had misrepresented ed you and deceived my father. I am sorry. I did doubt much of what he said, but it seemed quite convincing to my father. I am sorry you could not tell dad before he went. Will you forgive me?"

"I'm Afraid," He Commenced Slowly.

"There is nothing to forgive." The gladness in Caleb's voice backed his assertion. "Yet I should like to make one condition—no not a condition," he added, "a favor. If," he hesitated, thinking of her black gown, "if you are not averse to going out, I should like very much to have you come with Carquinez and his wife to the opening of the Caliente works next month."

"I shall be very glad to come. I shall be out of mourning. Dad does not want me to be a recluse. Will that seal our forgiveness?"

She got up, slim in the twilight, and held out her hand. She had spoken in the present tense of her father. Caleb noticed, as if death had not severed the link between them.

"I also am very glad," he said, as he released her fingers.

He set up the unframed canvas that night in his room in the little bungalow set up for his use on the works, and it was the last thing his eyes rested upon before he turned in. Somehow it seemed to epitomize his career—water and desert places. He fancied Betty and himself in such a solitude, preparing the way for the fertility and population that should follow their discovery and development of water. And Betty did not appear entirely as co-worker. He had seen something of the softer side of her that came as a revelation that warmed and thrilled him to the core.

Nor did he forget to acknowledge Mary Morgan's share in all this, giving himself no credit for her straightening out matters with Betty Clinton. It was a reflex feeling from Cox's magnanimity that had sent Mary Morgan to Betty Clinton more than any desire to show up Baxter. So Caleb fancied, and was grateful. Mrs. Carquinez was another one to come in for an unuttered blessing. The world began to go very well.

CHAPTER XVI

The Opening

There was no doubt, from the very beginning, of the success of the formal opening of the works. The day was perfect and the guests arrived by special train or motor to accord with a program laid out by Cox's secretary, who was a wizard for schedules.

Caleb had secured seats for Betty Clinton and Mr. and Mrs. Carquinez, with whom she arrived, at the side of the table opposite the speakers. He had personally conducted them on the inspection tour and he saw them in their places before he went on to his own.

A table had been set for the foremen and their wives. Maria and Padilla had been sent invitations and they sat with this group, subordinate yet a part of the celebration. Beside Padilla was Evans, the water-diviner, now in general charge of the diverting ponds that extended above the lengths of the filter galleries.

While Caleb had greeted these humbler but necessary workers, one of the foremen rose as Betty, with the artist and his wife, was chatting with Evans, to whom she had been introduced at her own request.

"I had to fire that chap, Johnson, yesterday, Mr. Warner," said the man in a low tone. "He showed up drunk and he had a flask of some rotgut in his pocket. He was hanging around this morning and I warned him off. Acted dopey, to me."

It was curious, Caleb thought, that Baxter, if it was Baxter, should have come in at the end of the project he had tried to ruin as an involuntary witness to Caleb's triumph. He had little sympathy left for Baxter, no regret at the end of so one-sided a friendship. The way of the transgressor had to be hard and Baxter had strayed too far and too often beyond the pale not to deserve punishment. The thought of him did not accord with the spirit of the day and he dismissed it with the fact of his discharge.

The guests consisted of the heads of works, visiting engineers, some of whom had come a long way in professional interest, a selected list of stockholders, civic representatives from Oakville — the all-important press, including Vedder, and such wives and relatives of the fairer sex as considered the event worth their presence.

Cox presided and introduced the speakers. When it came to Caleb's turn a storm of applause greeted his rising, somewhat to his embarrassment. He managed a few phrases, accrediting Cox and the company with much of the meed of praise, paying more easily a glowing tribute to Hinckley, who was to follow him, neatly transferring his own burden of diffidence to the engineer. As he bowed to the renewed plaudits that came with the close of his little speech he looked across to where Betty Clinton sat at the extreme end of the opposite benches. Her hands added to the tribute, her face was aglow with enthusiasm.

Mayan Civilization Mystery of History

The great mystery of the Mayan civilization is that of its calendar. As early as 300 A. D. and possibly much earlier, the Maya had developed a method of reckoning time which is quite as accurate as our own. The problem of adjusting the length of the year to the uneven number of days which it contains had been solved. The complete Maya calendar is capable of fixing any given date exactly and uniquely in a period of over 5,000,000 years, says E. E. Free in the Forum.

This calendar and the mass of astronomical knowledge which must lie back of it, appeared in Central America suddenly. No history has been traced for its origins. One century it is not there; the next century it is there. Some experts believe that the Maya culture was imported, possibly from India or from Egypt. Others believe that it originated in America, at sites not yet discovered, or that its relics, being perishable, have disappeared.

Gossamer Gowns

The weaving of gowns from gossamer, which is now so much in evidence, was suggested in the Eighteenth century. Le Bon of Languedoc prepared a "silk" from spiders, which was afterwards woven into gloves and stockings. Louis XIV of France, possessed a coat made of cobweb, and in 1877 the Empress of Brazil presented Queen Victoria with a dress composed entirely of cobwebs which, for fineness of texture and beauty of fabric, surpassed the most valuable silk. Nevertheless, cobweb "silk" is not likely to become a commercial proposition, for the voracious spider eats every day 27 times its own weight of insect food, which is, of course, expensive, and produces in return only half a grain of "silk."

Walking

Walking is an art that most men and women are able to acquire or recover, and without serious trespass upon the vocations of life, if only they do not yield to the softness of modern comforts and convenience of wheels. The women who in certain parts of the world still carry their burdens for miles on their heads have kept a carriage which queens must envy. The men who walked or ran in the primitive chase had a physical development which 10,000 years of civilization have not improved upon. Walking is the one universal art to save the race from physical degeneracy. Millions are daily yielding to temptation of wheels when they would be better off physically, not to say financially, if they accepted the transportation of their own feet.—New York Sun.

Uncle Sam—World's Biggest Business Man

By GUY U. HARDY
Congressman from Colorado.

THE biggest business enterprise in the world is that of the United States government. The congress is the board of directors, so to speak, and the manager in a way. The two most important functions of congress are:

First, appropriating the money for the conduct of the various enterprises of the government.

Second, raising the funds which are required for the conduct of this great business enterprise. This is done principally through the internal revenue and the tariff acts.

The books are balanced for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1925. The estimates are made and money mostly spent for 1926, and appropriations are now made for 1927.

Look at the figures for 1925. They are interesting, showing as they do what it costs to run this vast government for a year. In these figures I will include receipts and expenditures in the Post Office department. They are usually left out of such comparisons:

For 1925
Total receipts	$4,379,740,162.01
Total expenditures	4,129,234,923.68
Surplus	$ 250,505,238.33

Two big items of expenditure are the Post Office department and the public debt. These items in 1925 were as follows:

Debt retired from ordinary receipts	$466,538,113.83
Interest on public debt	881,806,662.36
Post office service	622,808,261.17
Total	$1,971,153,037.36

The appropriations made by congress for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1927, will amount to about $3,960,000,000. It may interest you to know how this vast sum of money is split up among the different departments and independent establishments of the government.

For the Post Office department and the postal service the appropriation for next year amounts to $735,038,331. It is about three quarters of a billion dollars. Just about the total cost of running the federal government in 1914 outside of the postal service. The post office service cost $697,067,449 in 1926, and $639,422,451 in 1925. But go back to 1914 again. It cost only $283,543,769 to run the postal service that year.

These increasing amounts do not indicate extravagance, but do indicate growing business, additional service, and increased pay for postal employees.

The postal service is practically self-sustaining. The people who use the postal service pay the bills. It lost about $24,000,000 in 1926, and will lose about the same amount in 1927.

Where does the money all go? What in the world can the postmaster and the service use that altogether costs three-quarters of a billion dollars in a year?

Well, here are a few items that may interest you:

Wrapping twine, and so forth, costs $470,000. The stationery costs $919,000, which would be a good big yearly order for any print shop.

It costs $7,750,000 to print the postage stamps, stamped envelopes, postcards, and newspaper wrappers.

For mail bags and their repair the sum of $2,000,000 was appropriated.

The star-route service, where the mail is transported to or between post offices off the railroads, costs $13,100,000.

It costs about $113,500,000 to have the mails hauled by railroads and $1,550,000 by steamboats.

It costs $60,936,121 for the service performed by the railroad mail clerks, most of whom sort and route the mails on the trains.

You like to have your mail delivered at your front door every day, or several times a day. It costs $116,600,000 to pay salaries to your letter carriers. It will require $8,600,000 to pay boys to carry special delivery letters next year.

In this modern day the farmer gets almost as good mail delivery service as the city man. More than 45,397 rural routes run out through farming sections covering 1,249,504 miles. These rural route carriers will be paid approximately $105,600,000 for next year. This remarkable service was started only 29 years ago. The service and expenditures have been just about doubled in the last 10 years.

The air service is the latest development for rapid transportation of the mails. A line of airplanes carries the mail between New York and San Francisco. This service is more or less experimental. It costs $2,650,000 a year, and $2,000,000 is being appropriated for contract air-mail service in other sections.

The appropriation for the War department for next year is $342,609,611.16. This is divided up thus: For military activities, $263,948,856.16, and for nonmilitary activities, $78,660,755.

A good deal of money for peace times. But not half as much as some enthusiasts would have us spend. Congress is between two fires. One class of citizens would have us cut the army down to a minimum. Another class would enlarge it greatly. During the discussion of this bill members of congress received thousands of telegrams from citizens asking for enlarged activities and increased appropriations.

Congress has endeavored to do the safe and sane thing and to keep the enormous expense of the military establishment from growing unduly in peace time.

The size of the army is limited by the appropriation bill to a maximum of, and not to exceed 12,000 commissioned officers, 125,000 enlisted men, and 8,000 Philippine scouts. The average number in the army will be about 11,749 officers, 118,750 men, and 7,000 Philippine scouts.

There are, naturally, some large items of expense in connection with an army of this size. The food bill is $16,109,908 and the clothing bill is $5,101,916; for the medical department $1,280,952; air service, $15,256,694; United States Military academy, $2,841,439.

In the nonmilitary activities are some interesting items. The Panama canal costs $7,656,074, but we get about $14,000,000 a year more than we spend down there. National cemeteries cost $777,860 and national military parks $216,104. The sum of $50,200,000 will be spent on rivers and harbors and $10,400,000 for flood control. For national soldiers' homes $8,255,100 is included.

The amount appropriated for the Navy department for next year is $321,794,475. That is $19,000,000 more than was appropriated for the past year. But the amount congress gives the navy for next year is $1,294,955 less than the budget estimates.

The big item in the bill is pay of the navy, which amounts to $119,863,000. This provides for about 4,837 officers and 82,500 men. Provisions cost $19,207,000. Fuel, $13,950,000. For new construction of vessels, $28,275,000. Air service, $18,996,288. To modernize battleships, $7,500,000. Marine corps, which includes about 1,095 officers, 18,000 men, $23,220,347.

The Interior department gets $226,832,918 of appropriation for 1927. This is about $7,900,000 less than it was for 1925. As a matter of fact, a large part of this sum goes for pensions to the veterans of wars previous to the great World war.

The Interior department has to do largely with the western states, since the public lands are there, and most of the Indians. The reclamation projects and the national parks are mostly in the west but they are open to and operated for the benefit of the public at large. Checks that go out from the bureau of pensions are cashed in every hamlet, village and town in the land and the bureau of education serves the people of the nation as a whole.

The Department of Agriculture gets $139,270,000 under the appropriation act for 1927. In 1926 it got $138,075,191. A big part of this sum goes for federal aid to highway system and for forest roads.

The varied activities of the Agriculture department are indicated somewhat by the different bureaus, and the amount appropriated suggests to a large extent of service rendered. Here are some items in the appropriations for 1927:

Experiment stations	$[illegible]
Extension Service	[illegible]
Weather Bureau	[illegible]
Bureau of Animal Industry	[illegible]
Bureau of Dairy Industry	[illegible]
Bureau of Plant Industry	[illegible]
Forest Service	[illegible]
Bureau of Chemistry	[illegible]
Bureau of Soils	[illegible]
Bureau of Entomology	[illegible]
Biological Survey	[illegible]
Agricultural Economics	[illegible]
Home Economics	[illegible]
Insecticide Board	[illegible]

And there are a lot of miscellaneous activities of benefit to agriculture here and there in one way and another that cost large sums. Here are several: Enforcement of plant quarantine act, $[illegible]; eradication of pink bollworm in cotton, $[illegible]; co-operative forest-fire protection, $[illegible]; experiments in live stock production, $[illegible]; packers and stockyards act enforcement, $440,000; grain futures act enforcement, $121,530.

Next to the Post Office department the treasury has the most employees of any, having something like 52,000 people on the payroll.

Internal Revenue Service costs	$[illegible]
National prohibition enforcement	[illegible]
Customs Service	[illegible]
Federal Farm Loan Bureau	[illegible]
Bureau of Engraving and Printing	[illegible]
Coast Guard	[illegible]
Secret Service	[illegible]
Public Health Service	[illegible]
Mint and Assay Office	[illegible]
Public buildings	[illegible]

The prohibition unit has to do with enforcement of national prohibition and narcotic acts. In the service are about 3,800 men.

The coast guard has much to do with the prevention of smuggling—and much attempted smuggling is in violation of the prohibition acts. Quite a fleet is maintained by the coast guard. It includes 74 vessels for regular activities and 25 ships and boats for use in the antismuggling service. In addition some new boats and five airplanes are being built for this activity.

Queen Gave Money for Free Library

The first free circulating library in America was sponsored by Queen Anne in 1696, who not only contributed $2,000 of her own money for the project but prevailed upon William III, then king of England, to assist in a substantial manner. The library, housed in a little brick building on State House hill, in Annapolis, Md., started with 1,000 volumes, and from the first played a big part in the life of the families of the royal colony.

The idea for such a library was conceived by Dr. Thomas Bray, a London cleric, who had been appointed commissary of ecclesiastical affairs in Maryland. It was not a much sought after appointment, but Doctor Bray accepted, provided the bishops would help him provide parochial libraries for the use of missionaries volunteering to go to America. The bishops indorsed his proposal, but before Doctor Bray was ready to sail for his new field his idea had expanded until it embraced a library for the gentry as well as for the clergy and "whomsoever should wish to borrow a book."

The books which made up this first free library are now housed in the library of St. John's college.—Baltimore Sun.

Flies 815 Miles an Hour

A fly which travels 815 miles an hour is described by Dr. Charles Townsend in the Scientific American. The insect is known technically as Cephenemyia and is one of the largest known flies. It flies so fast that it would be impossible to capture one while in flight. In appearance the fly resembles a leanly built bumblebee.

RADIO

Radio Chief Talks to College Editors.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Radio on the farm is yielding more dollars and cents return on the investment, developing a more prosperous American agriculture and bringing about a better contented, understanding class of farmers than any other single scientific contribution of the age, Sam Pickard, chief of radio, United States Department of Agriculture, told the convention of agricultural college editors recently at East Lansing, Mich.

After visiting the principal radio stations and approximately 600 farmers on a farm radio survey tour through 20 agricultural states, Mr. Pickard stated that both college and commercial broadcasters are making an intelligent effort to anticipate the farmer's problems with interesting, helpful programs, and are winning large and faithful audiences of the most enterprising class of farmers.

Practical Application.

Concrete examples of how practical application of information gained through radio is helping the farmers' bank balance were cited. In districts 60 miles from a railroad he discovered farmers who had changed their farming to more profitable lines suggested by authoritative radio talks.

"The farm fan," he said, "has two chief criticisms of radio. The one most often voiced is the curse of not getting enough sleep. Most of them admit they sit up with their sets late into the night. Many others say that while they like to be neighborly they tire of the entire community dropping in every winter evening and then forgetting to go home."

A plea for the college to dramatize informational programs, injecting into them greater interest and more humor, was made.

Competition Is Keen.

"I know of no field into which educational agencies have entered that offers keener competition than that of radio. The day has passed when the mediocre speaker can hold a radio audience. The lecture of long difficult words and sentences must give way to the more friendly, natural dialogue presented by effective radio voices.

"Until educational institutions value the effectiveness of radio instruction highly enough to adequately finance a competent staff, trained in the technique of broadcasting, they cannot expect successfully to utilize this new invention, probably the greatest boon to education since the printing press was invented."

The United States Department of Agriculture's new policy of providing a staff of feature writers to weave timely information into dialogue material to be broadcast by trained announcers was commended to the college editors.

Why "Straight-Line Frequency" Is Wrong

In the course of an article in the Radio Broadcast Magazine, Zeh Bouck, well-known radio writer, points out that the expression "straight-line frequency" is incorrect. The right term is "straight frequency line," he says, for frequencies are not characterized by lines. However, there is such a thing as a "frequency line," which refers to the line of resonant frequency plotted against capacity variations in a tuned circuit. In future, then, let us refer to those condensers of the weirdly shaped plates as "straight frequency line" condensers. Incidentally, we must be careful though, in dubbing all condensers with unusually shaped plates as true "straight frequency line" ones for, as Mr. Bouck points out, there is now on the market a modified "straight frequency line" condenser, which is designed to give a straight frequency-line effect on the short waves and something approaching a capacity-line effect on the longer waves.

Wiring for Your Set Need Not Be Exposed

Outdoor aerials are not essential to good radio reception. Neither is any other exposed wiring required. In an attic, wire of sufficient length may be supported in zig-zag arrangement on ordinary porcelain knobs attached to rafters. The wire may be run down through the house wall and connected to an outlet receptacle. The ground wire may be brought up from the basement through the lower sill of the house and connected to the set. Thus no wire is exposed anywhere. The user plugs in his set just as he would connect up a floor lamp or any electric appliance.

Battery Charge Gauge

A hydrometer permits the operator to know the condition of charge that exists within the battery. A full charge will float the graduated tube high, and when the battery is discharged it will sink.

FOR THE NOTEBOOK

Adding new electrolyte does not charge a storage battery.

Copper is most commonly employed in the winding of inductance coils.

With proper care, a vacuum tube should give from 700 to 1,000 hours' service.

Reverse the leads on the grid coil if signals are mushy and station hard to get.

A great many parts of a set can be bought cheaper than an amateur can make them.

Soft rubber sponges under the sockets will overcome noises caused by the vibration of tubes.

Because the building absorbs energy, do not run a lead-in from the front of the house to the rear.

The efficiency of a storage battery is measured by the ratio of an output to the input, generally in ampere hours.

Batteries will last much longer when used intermittently for short periods of time, rather than when used continually for long periods.

Heavy Wire Not Needed in Broadcast Receivers

There is no particular advantage in employing wire larger than No. 24 in any part of a radio set designed for broadcast reception. This size has proved to be the best for inductances, which are the most critical units as far as specified wire diameter is concerned, and it is plenty big enough to carry safely the current of the "A" circuit, which is the heaviest current in any part of any receiver.

The No. 14 copper-tinned busbar which enjoys wide use among home constructors is not a bit better than the much more flexible No. 24. If bent nicely parallel with or at right angles to the panel it makes a set look rather spectacular, but direct point-to-point connection is undeniably better from the electrical standpoint.

Quick Action Necessary When Acid Is Spilled

"What to do if radio battery acid is spilled on fabric floor coverings or clothing," was the subject of a recent microphone chat over station KOA, Denver, in a bi-mouthly series of home economics programs.

Liquor in a storage battery is diluted sulphuric acid and will burn a hole in fabrics if not washed out immediately.

Do not carry a storage battery across rugs or carpets; nor should it be permitted to touch curtains and draperies.

It is important that the following instructions be observed should some of the liquor be spilled on clothing, or in fact, fabric of any kind:

Mix household ammonia with cold water in equal parts. Place white blotter under spot where liquid soiled the garment, if it is clothing. Use medicine dropper to saturate portion covered with battery acid. The blotter beneath the spot will attract ammonia water through the fabric, washing out the acid. Tamp the spot with cheesecloth to absorb liquid from cloth. Continue until the threads have been thoroughly washed clean of acid. Blot as dry as possible, then hold before an electric fan until completely dry.

Battery acid is treacherous in its damage to fabric. A heavy acid stain may go unnoticed until the garment is laundered or dry cleaned and ready for pressing. When heat of the iron or moisture from steam in pressing penetrates the cloth, a corrosive action causes immediate destruction of the fibers. If this happens, it is too late for laundering or dry cleaning—the cloth is ruined.

Where color of the rug, carpet or garment may be black or blue, don't conclude that a stain will not show because the shade is dark. Stains from battery acid will change blue or black to red.

Dry cleaning may restore changed colors by an alkali treatment if dry cleaned immediately. But tell your cleaner what caused the color to change—just say, "battery acid was spilled on it."

P. G. & E. to Lay Gas Main

The Pacific Gas and Electric Company will in a short time begin the contruction of a gas main to East Palo Alto, Ravenswood and contiguous territory which sections have heretofore not been supplied with gas. The company has signed up 230 consumers in that locality but in a very brief time hope to double that number. The new system will start from Coleman avenue in Menlo Oaks and run direct to Wollow road near the O'Keefe ranch. From there the pipes will be laid on Oak avenue to Menalto avenue to Donohoe street to East Palo Alto. Later the system is to be extended to the Bay road. The pipes are to be from three to four inches insuring a good service. The rapid growth of this section demands all these modern improvements. With the completion of the Dumbarton bridge the population will double in a short time. The company is expending the sum of $45,00d in making these improvements. They have ordered the material for construction and work ought to begin within two weeks.

St. Joseph's Parochial school will open for the fall term on September 8 with an increased attendance. The school is the best in the state for boys and girls who are given careful attention by good sisters who devote their lives to the training of children for the life battle.

Edwin J. Smith and Wife Here

Edwin J. Smith and wife have moved down from the city and will live here permanently. Mr. Smith is in the postal service of the government and is located at the Ferry building. He is shortly to be transferred to the postoffice at Burlingame. The commuting will then be easier for the young man.

Appointed Chief Gardener

A. Taylor, the expert horticulturist, has been appointed chief gardener at the McNear estate on the Ringwood road. The estate is now owned by the Pachels who are to make a tour of Europe next October. They will be gone all winter.

Market Changes Hands

The California Market has changed proprietorship. A. Turner and A. Nelson of Redwood City have taken over the market. A. L. Lucier, the poular manager under the former ownership, has gone to the Yosemite for a brief vacation. He will reside in Redwood City. The new porprietors are married men and will make their homes in Menlo Park.

Appointed General Manager

E. Geary has been appointed general manager of the Stanley Kelly Realty Company here. He is a live wire and expects to put over some big deals which he has under consideration. He takes the place of Mr. Jenkins who has been transferred to the city office of the concern. Mr. Geary says he has numerous inquiries for Menlo realty. He believes the nearness of the completion of the Dumbarton bridge has caused this activity.

Fred Nessler Returns

Fred Nessler has returned from his annual vacation spent in his former home, Los Angeles. Thirty years ago Mr. Nessler was chief of the fire department of that village. He owned property on the then outskirts of Los Angeles, which if he had retined until now would make him a multimillionaire. Fred has no regrets, however.

Terwilliger Resigns

Robert Terwilliger, for the past thirteen years assistant manager of the Bear Gulch Water Company, has resigned his position and will engage in business here.

Buckley Family Home

David Buckley and family arrived home on Saturday last from a motor trip through the Northwest and Oregon. Mr. Buckley owns valuable property in the City of Portland from which he derives a nice revenue. The Buckleys were away six weeks.

W. J. Murray Comes Home Today

W. J. Murray, the local realty broker, will arrive home today from his annual vacation spent at Gilroy Hot Springs.

Schools Opened Monday

The grammar school opened last Monday with an enrollment of 250 pupils. The trustees announce that work on the branch school building at Stanford Park will be commenced when the board of supervisors on next week will accept the budget and fix the tax rate for the ensuing year.

Home From Seabright

James G. Mason and his two charming daughters are home from Seabright, where they occupied the Mason cottage all summer.

Keep Shortridge On The Job

This is the final appeal to the voters of Menlo Park to cast their ballot on Tuesday next for the home candidate for United States Senator, Samuel M. Shortridge. Personal feelings should be laid aside and all should vote for Mr. Shortridge and make his home town the banner district of the county in its plurality. Keep the senatorship in Menlo Park for this place has been known for the number of U. S. Senators it has produced, Milton S. Latham, Leland Stanford, C. N. Felton and S. M. Shortridge were residents of Menlo Park. Mr. Voter do you want a man from Los Angeles to represent you in the senate? Would you not expect more from a resident of Menlo Park. Keep the senatorship in Menlo Park by voting for Senator Shortridge on next Tuesday. Home pride should compel this. Make it unanimous for Shortridge next Tuesday.

Valentino Was A Gardener Here

Rudolph Valentino, the shiek whose funeral caused such a furor in New York, was a gardener at Atherton seven years ago. He was a handsome youth then who could use his legs dexterously in the tango and it was this art that brought him fame and fortune. It is said that more people in New York viewed the remains than would have stood at the bier of a president or a king. Valentino caught a popular wave and rode on it to fame, but after all fame is only transitory. We are soon forgotten.

Bids Are Awarded

Three members of the Menlo Park Sanitary District met Thursday evening with John MacBain and the engineer, C. L. Dimmitt and opened bids for sewering Menlo avenue. There were five five bidders, the lowest being George C. DeGolyer of Oakland, who was awarded the contract for $1841.40. The engineers estimate was $2000. The members of the board present were Joseph A. Donohoe, P. P. Eyre and Edmund Doyle. The contractor agrees to lay 2,026 feet of six inch sewer pipe, 5 inch wyes, put in 8 manholes and one lamphole. The work is to be commenced at once and will be completed in thirty days. The thoroughfare is to be macadamized when the sewer is completed.

WOODSIDE

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Slade have returned from the Feather River Inn, where they have been spending a part of the summer. Their new home here will be ready for occupancy in two or three weeks. When they began building they planned for only a summer home but the house grew beyond the requirements of a mere summer rsidence and they have become so well pleased with the situation that they now intend to make it their permanent home.

Miss Barbara Pond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Pond, entertained a group of the younger set at a tea dance at the Menlo Country Club on Friday afternoon.

Dr. Ward of San Francisco will at once begin the construction of a handsome residence on property adjoining that of Russel Slade.

Under the direction of Miss Marjorie Josselyn, the old Tripp store has been re-shingled, broken lights have been replaced in the windows and such other repairs made as were necessary to protect it from destruction. Whether it has ever before been reroofed since its original shingling seventy years ago is unknown, but it is known that it has been untouched for over forty years which of itself speaks well for the redwood shingles that covered it. This is the first step in the plan to make the old store a community project and to preserve it as a State landmark and as a monument to Dr. Tripp and the Woodside pioneers who worked with him here in the early days.

The route of the high school bus has been changed so as to give a better service to the Woodside pupils attending the school. Instead of having to leave their homes at seven o'clock in the morning and being the last to be delivered to their homes at night after a ride of thirty miles, ethey will now be able to leave home at 7:40 and will be brought directly home from school in the afternoon saving about forty minutes on that end of the run.

Mrs. Anna Anderson, mother of Prof. Carl Anderson, who was very seriously ill a few months ago, has so far recovered that she plans to return to her home in Nebraska within the next two weeks.

Arthur Mighall, for many years a resident of Woodside and now living at San Mateo, is again in Woolside temporarily finishing the building of a house for his brother, Fred Mighall.

Mr. and Mrs. Mervyn MacArthur and family removed from their summer home here to Redwood City this week.

Bradford Leavitt spent this week motoring through Lake county.

Dr. and Mrs. Alanson Weeks will return to their home in San Francisco, next week, but will continue to spend the week ends here as long as the weather permits.

Charles Jenkins and Miss Elizabeth Jenkins, both of San Francisco, spent the last week end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jenkins here in Woodside.

Mr. and Mrs. George MacArthur of San Francisco, after a camping trip to Richardson Grove on the Redwood Highway, have been spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mighall.

J. D. RAPLEY IN APPEAL TO VOTERS

James D. Rapley, one of the five contestants for the office of constable in the Third township, has submitted the following appeal to the voters in asking their support next Tuesday at the primary election:

To My Fellow Citizens:

In offering myself to the voters of the Third Township for the office of Constable I present myself as a citizen who has resided here all of my lifetime—a period of fifty eight years. I was born in Redwood City. My parents were among Redwood City's earliest residents. I have never before sought a public office and I feel that my fellow citizens will recognize my right to ask their support because of this fact and the further reason that I am a son of the Third Township of San Mateo county.

During the World War my two eldest boys offered themselves to their country, both volunteering and served in the Navy, overseas. I have a family of nine boys and girls.

If I am elected your constable I will serve you to the very best of my ability. With this promise I ask your kind consideration and support on election day.

Sincerely yours,
J. D. RAPLEY

TO OPEN WILLOW ROAD

On Tuesday District Attorney Franklin Swart commenced a suit on behalf of the county against William A. Carnduff, M. F. X. Kavanaugh and others to restrict the defendants from blocking Willow Road at Ravenswood. The suit was filed in the office of Cousty Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese and will be heard in a few days when an injunction will be asked to prevent defendants from interfering with traffic in the road. The thoroughfare has been used for forty years by the public. Defendants claimed an equity in the throughfare for the reason that it has never been dedicated to the county. The road has become important in as much as it is the connecting link between the approach to the Dumbarton bridge and the Bay road. The terminal of the approach end with the Willow road and the latter runs into the Bay road at the O'Keefe ranch. It is understood when the suit is decided Supervisor MacBain stands ready to spend $25,000 in improving the ancient thoroughfare. The complaint alleges that on July 1, 1925, Carnduff built a fence across the road and prevented passage of traffic, it is charged. On July 28, last Kavanaugh and Carnduff placed an automobile across the road and stopped Ira Guy from passing, after threatening him with bodily harm, the complaint states.

SHIELDS CONFIDENT OF RE-ELECTION

I have made every effort to see all the voters of the county but there are many I have not seen and to those I appeal for their suffrage. The work not giving me the opportunity to make a thorough canvass, such as I would have loved to make. I am, however, willing to leave my candidacy in the hands of the voters whom I have served as auditor for the past twelve years and to the best of my ability. I trust my friends will come to the polls next Tuesday, if they do, I feel confident that I will be elected by a big majority.

If elected I will continue to serve the people faithfully and will run the office according to my own dictates No one will dictate to me or control my official duties. I solicit your vote.

J. J. SHIELDS

McGRATH SEEKS AUDITOR'S OFFICE

I have completed a canvass of the voters of the county and now on the eve of the great contest I can say with a feeling of confidence that I will be successful when the ballots are counted on next Tuesday evening. The voters have received me with courtesy and consideration wherever I wnt and I want to take this opportunity of thanking them for their kindness and consideration. I have made a clean canvass, asking the people to vote for me on my record and my standing in the county. I feel that I can conduct the office of County Auditor with a certain degree of ability and to the entire satisfaction of the people of San Mateo county. Having reached almost every voter I now leave my candidacy in their hands, hoping to secure recognition and the election Tuesday, next. I again thank the people for what they have done for me and I hope to be successful.

J. J. McGRATH

ROACH TRUSTS TO FATE

Frank P. Roach on the eve of election is confident he will make the hurdles and win the sehriff's office. He has made a thorough canvass of the voters in every section and wherever he went he found a strong sentiment in his favor, found friends rallying to his standard. Mr. Roach has seen all the voters, carried his message to them and leaves his fate with them, feeling that they will fully consider his qualification, his ability for
